281-73 House Vote Completes Action on GOP's 'Voluntary' Bill

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday completed action on an inflation control measure which Republicans called "a step in the right direction," but which fell far short of what President Truman requested.

The measure was passed by the House, 281 to 73, and sent to the White House. The previous day the Senate approved it, 77 to 10.

The bill's procedure through the House was a shorthand version of its course during the two preceding days in the Senate. Under a rule which permitted only two hours of debate and forbade the offering of amendments, Democrats sought vainly to give the President compulsory powers over the allocation of scarce commodities.

Seek to Recommit Bill

The method they attempted was to recommit the bill to a House committee with instructions to add the authority for the Government to channel key materials.

The move failed, 73 to 156, just as motions for similar purposes had been defeated in the Senate. And, again as in the Senate, most of the Democrats finally had to join with the Republicans in voting for passage because, as Representative Spense (D., Ky.) put it: "It is this or nothing."

Voting for passage were 178 Republicans, 102 Democrats and 1 American Laborite. Against the bill were 29 Republicans and 44 Democrats.

There was no word yesterday from the White House on whether Mr. Truman would approve the measure. He has taken the position that anything short of his original 10-point program is inadequate. And he agreed that the present bill was an attempt to "pass the political buck" to him.

Contains Some Phases

Nevertheless, the measure does contain some of the phases of control legislation he asked for. And, through Senate amendment, the language on its most controversial provision—relaxation of antitrust law provisions as an inducement for voluntary agreements on allocations—was taken from an Administration bill.

The bill's principal provisions:

1. It extends for one year controls over rail transportation, which would otherwise have expired next February 29.

2. It provides a similar extension for controls over exports, and gives the Commerce Department power to use price criteria in granting export licenses. This permits it to prohibit the export of goods at too high prices, or to favor the application of exporters who sell at lowest prices. It is felt this may exert some indirect effect on holding down domestic prices.

3. It grants power to the Secre-

Standard Raises Prices Here on Gas, Fuel Oil

Motorists in Greater Washington can expect to pay another 1.1 cents a gallon for Esso gasoline beginning Monday.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, distributor of Esso products in most East Coast states, announced yesterday it was advancing prices on gasoline, home heating oil, kerosene and heavy fuel oil, effective Monday.

High test gasoline in the area will jump to about 25½ cents a gallon on heating oils, 1.7 cents a gallon for kerosene and 46 cents a barrel on heavy fuel oil.

Anderson Granted Authority To Name Speculators in Grain

Extension of Ban On Alcohol Making Expected Monday

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson is expected Monday to order the present 60-day shutdown of the Nation's distilleries, scheduled to end on Christmas, continued until New Year's Day.

In addition, he will limit January consumption of grain for the manufacture of beverage alcohol to 2,500,000 bushels.

Last January the Nation's distilleries consumed 8,584,181 bushels. It was the largest single month's use in the year, although the rate was under that just previous to the present shutdown in October—when 8,164,000 bushels were consumed in 25 days.

The 60-day holiday, which started October 25, was agreed to by the industry at the request of President Truman's Citizens Food Committee. It was part of Mr. Truman's program to save food for export overseas.

Anderson is expected to act promptly under the powers voted to him by Congress this week to limit grain consumption by distillers until February 1. Many distillers are reported prepared to start distilling full blast on Thursday, which means that mashing

Resolution Signed By Truman; Lists Being Prepared

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Secretary of Agricultural Clinton P. Anderson was authorized yesterday to reveal the names of speculators in grain and other commodities.

A resoluton granting that authority was signed late in the afternoon by President Truman, shortly after it was passed, without a dissenting vote, by the House.

It previously had been rushed through the Senate late Thursday, after Anderson had refused, point-blank, to reveal the names Thursday morning to the Senate Appropriations Committee in secret session.

Whether Anderson will reveal the names before he is again called before the Senate Appropriations Committee was undetermined last night. At the Commodity Exchange Authority at the Agriculture Department, it was stated that clerks have been busy for two days preparing the list, and their jobs may be completed early next week.

In the meantime, Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) of the committee announced that plans to recall Anderson before that

China Included In Assistance; To Reconvene On January 6

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress last night ended its 33-day emergency session on one last note of compromise—a 540 million dollar foreign aid appropriation paring Administration western Europe estimates to 122 millions and granting China an unmarked 18 million dollars.

This ratified, like the part-way inflatio ncontrol measure before it, Congress drifted to a colorless close. It will meet again in regular session January 6, after a Yuletide vacation of 17 days.

The Senate adjourned sine die at 7:17 p. m. after quickly approving the two-house conference settlement on stopgap aid. The House, which earlier approved the foreign relief compromise, waited only for the Senate to act. Then Speaker Martin adjourned the House at 7:32 p. m.

During the interval, one toneless House quartet attempted a song, as a few hung back for the final gavel. The President messaged that he had "no further communications." Majority Leader Charles A. Halleck wished the House a Merry Christmas. Then the rush for the exits was on.

Both on His Desk

President Truman, who called Congress back November 17 to consider a 597 million dollar winter relief program for western Europe and a 10-point domestic anti-inflation program ranging from minor price restraints to ures on his desk at the end of the limited rationing, had these measures.

1. A stop-gap appropriation providing only 522 million dollars for western Europe, 75 million shy of his request. Conferees split the difference between the 509 million the House approved and 540 million the Senate granted. A Senate-approved 18 million for China was tacked on to the compromise. Only 340 million dollars was provided for Army-occupied areas of Germany, Japan and Korea as against 490 million dollars the President asked.

2. A GOP inflation control measure approving only three of the President's 10 points extended control over exports and transportion plus authority to limit use of grain for production of distilled spirits. Main GOP addition authorized voluntary agreements to combat high prices by allocating scarce materials.

The President in turn sent Con-

U. S. Is Striving To Prevent Third World War, He Tells Lawmakers

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The European recovery program yesterday began what promised to be a rough legislative journey on Capitol Hill.

President Truman, in a long and soberly worded message, asked Congress to commit the United States to a four-year program of economic aid to Europe costing 17 billion dollars.

He proposed that the program, greatest of its kind in history, be directed by a new and small Government agency headed by a $20,000-a-year Economic Cooperation Administrator with broad powers. This official would be assisted by a $17,500-a-year deputy and a $25,000-a-year roving ambassador.

Mr. Truman, asking Congress to work on the program as "rapidly" as possible, recommended a first American installment of $6,800,000,000. This would be for a 15-month period, starting April 1, 1948. The program as a whole would run to June 30, 1952.

To Block Third World War

The Chief Executive said that this Nation, in company with other peace-loving nations, was striving to insure that there never will be a World War III. If Europe fails to recover, he added, the peoples of the continent might be driven to surrender thir basic rights to "totalitarian control." This, he went on to say, would be "a shattering blow to peace and stability" and might well bring about a change in "the American way of life."

Mr. Truman asmeinded:

"I recommend this program of United States support for European recovery to the Congress in full confidence of its wisdom and necessity as a major step in our Nation's quest for a just and lasting peace."

No Mention of Russia

Nowhere in his message did Mr. Truman mention Russia. However, he did mention the disruptive activities of her agents, the Communists, in the free countries of Europe, saying:

"We must not be blind to the fact that the Communists have announced determined opposition to any effort to help Europe get back on its feet.

"There will unquestionably be further incitements to strike, not for the purpose of redressing the legitimate grievances of particular groups, but for the purpose of bringing chaos in the hope that it will pave the way for totalitarian control."

The presidential message, along with the draft of an ERP bill and an exhaustive background report, landed in Congress five months and a half after Secretary of State Marshall electrified Europe with a speech at Harvard University, promising American aid to free countries which tried to help themselves.

As the recovery program was unveiled, the scene on the Hill was undramatic in the extreme. It was get-away day for the Christmas holidays, ending a special session

Answers Suggested

Questions on Marshall Plan Which Congress Must Face

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The "Marshall Plan" for European recovery involves scores of unanswered questions which Congress will have to answer in its regular session starting in January. Here are some of the questions, and some of the answers recommended by the Administration yesterday:

Q.—How much will it cost the United States?

A.—For the 15 months from April 1, 1948, to June 30, 1949, it will cost $6,820,000,000, not including 822 million dollars for feeding and otherwise maintaining the people of western Germany. For the following three years, ending June 30, 1952, it will cost between 8.3 and 11 billion dollars, including expenses in Germany.

Q.—Will Congress be asked to vote these sums all at once?

A.—Appropriations will be sought in January for the first 15 months; an authorization will also be sought for the whole 4¼-year period, with a ceiling figure of 17 billion dollars. Appropriations for the last three years will be sought at yearly intervals.

Q.—Will American aid take the form of free grants or loans?

A.—Both. Consumable goods like food, fuel and fertilizer, will be provided as free grants to countries unable to pay dollars for them; capital goods for reconstruction and recovery will be financed by loans, to be repaid with interest.

Q.—What other return do we expect from the Europeans?

A.—First of all, we expect them to carry out their promises to lift their production, lower trade barriers, concert their economic policies and do their utmost to make themselves self-supporting. We also expect them to set aside funds in their respective local currencies, commensurate with the value of the free grants they get from us.

Q.—What will be done with these funds in local currencies?

A.—They can be withheld from use to help check inflation, or used to retire national debts so as to strengthen internal financial stability, or to help pay the cost of local recovery projects approved by the World Bank, or for administrative costs of the recovery program, or to develop local sources of scarce minerals and other materials needed by the United States.

Q.—Who will decide how these funds are to be used?

A.—The United States will make a bilateral agreement with each

Recovery Signs Key to Accord On Germany, He Tells Nation

Secretary Marshall told the American people last night that the next few months in western Europe hold the key to breaking the east-west deadlock over Germany.

There can be no agreement on Germany, he said in a radio report, until western Europe gives convincing signs of recovery. In the light of the Foreign Ministers' failure in London, he said Russia is waiting to see how the present "vacuum" in western Europe will be filled.

"The issue is really clear-cut," he said, "and I fear there can be no settlement until the coming months demonstrate whether or not the civilization of western Europe will prove vigorous enough to rise above the destructive effects of the war and restore a healthy society.

"Officials of the Soviet Union and leaders of the Communist parties openly predict that this restoration will not take place.

Confident in Rehabilitation

"We, on the other hand, are confident in the rehabilitation of western European civilization with its freedoms.

"Now, until the result of this struggle becomes clearly apparent, there will continue to be a very real difficulty to resolve, even on paper, agreed terms for a treaty of peace."

The Secretary spoke only a few hours after President Truman had submitted a four-year program to Congress to put western Europe on its feet.

In the morning the President and his entire Cabinet had gone to the National Airport to welcome the Secretary back from London, and the President had told him "I think you did a good job."

Noticing that the Secretary looked tired, the President said he wanted him to "get at least a week's rest." Accordingly, the Secretary intends to leave today to spend about 10 days with Mrs. Marshall at Pinehurst, N. C., before the start of congressional hearings on the European Recovery Program.

Ready for Battle

The Secretary's speech last night wa sa clear intimation that he is ready to battle for speedy and complete enactment of the recovery program submitted to Congress.

Never before—not even in his famous Harvard speech which launched the program last June—has he put so much stress on westeern Europe as the key to the future.

He said Russia was determined to grip western Germany in the same "monopolistic stranglehold" which, he said, had already made eastern Germany "little more than a dependent province of the Soviet Union."

And he made it plain that he did not expect Russia to budge on German issues until western Europe showed whether it could recover, or whether it would sink into chaos and Communist control.

Because western Europe is still a "vacuum," he said, Russia completely opposed almost every pro-

Grant Urges 'Governor' as Head of City

Proposal Is Seen As Sharpest Blow Against Home Rule

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A governor appointed by the President should head up the District government according to Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d.

General Grant said this, protesting aspects of the Auchincloss home rule plan which would transfer certain key Federal activities to city control. Speaking at a meeting of the Committee of 100 on the Federal City, his remarks represented the sharpest public attack so far against the home rule proposal.

Grant is chairman of the National Capitol Park and Planning Commission. The committee of 100 is a unit of the American Planning and Civic Association. It met at St. John's Parish House.

Sharpe Seconds Idea

The governor idea was promptly seconded by C. Melvin Sharpe, member of the District Board of Education. Sharpe took office as new chairman of the committee.

Sharpe emphasized that the committee had never taken a stand on suffrage proposals here, but that its interest in the Auchincloss report was to see "how far the Federal responsibility for the Federal city is safeguarded."

As first speaker, Dr. George C. Galloway, staff director for the House District home rule subcommittee headed by Representative James C. Auchincloss, outlined six forms of insurance for the Federal interest offered in the home rule plan.

They included the following restrictions which would surround operation of the elected city council and appointed manager government proposed in the plan:

Three armed bandits snatched a $7398 payroll on the steps of the Darby Printing Co., 2414 Douglas st. ne., yesterday morning, then slipped through a tightly drawn police cordon.

A manhunt by FBI agents and Metropolitan police was under way last night. Police said there was an "apparent similarity" between yesterday's holdup and the $7500 payroll robbery Wednesday in Silver Spring, Md.

Some hours after yesterday's holdup, the getaway car (which had been stolen in the District, according to the FBI) was found abandoned on Varnum st. in Mount Rainier, Md., near the Kaywood Theater.

Capt. Robert Bryant, acting chief of the detective bureau, said one of the bandit trio had been identified as Mack Wilson Fierst, 37-year-

Gen. Meyers Indicted on Six Counts

Grand Jury Returns Perjury Charges; Lamarre Accused

Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, retired AAF procurement officer, was indicted by a District grand jury yesterday on charges of committing perjury and persuading another to lie under oath.

He will be brought here for arraignment January 7.

The grand jury brought three counts of perjury and three counts of subornation of perjury against the free-spending general in connection with his testimony during hearings before the Senate War Investigating Committee. Each count carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in jail.

Bleriot H. Lamarre, the $51.50 "dummy" president of Meyers' Aviation Electric Co. of Vandalia, Ohio, the man who the grand jury said Meyers "corruptly procured, suborned and induced" to commit perjury, was indicted on three counts of perjury.

The Lemarre arraignment also is scheduled for January 7.

At the request of United States District Attorney George Morris Fay, Justice David A. Pine issued bench warrants for the arrest of the two defendants.

District Attorney George Morris Fay, who, together with Assistant District Attorney Edward Molenof, presented the perjury cases to the grand jury, asked that bond of $2000 be set for Meyers, and of $1000 for Lamarre.

Through his attorney, John H. Amen, Meyers last night informed the U. S. district attorney in New York that he would surrender and furnish bond.

In Dayton, Ohio, U. S. Commissioner Charles Ozias said Lamarre

Foes of Reds Secede; Split French Labor

Anti-Communists, Resenting Strikes, Quit Confederation

Paris, Dec. 19 (AP).—The anti-Communist minority seceded from the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor today as the result of the recent wave of nation-wide strikes.

The wide-open split in French labor was voted by delegates to a national conference of the "Workers Force," the anti-Communist wing of the confederation which coalesced during the strikes and centered about the personality of Leon Jouhaux, long-time secretary of the CGT and now co-secretary with a Communist.

The faction is estimated to have one million of the federation's six million members, but about a quarter of the CGT members are estimated to have refused to pay their dues.

The resolution to secede charged the Communist leadership had not hesitated to "hurl the working class into an adventure which could only destroy syndical unity" for reasons foreign to unionism. The resolution declared a crusade to "free the French syndical movement from all political control."

Led by representatives of the coal miners and metal workers, the secessionists mustered 156 votes to 1 for the resolution. Immediately all minority representatives resigned their CGT posts and began preparing for a national congress to organize an opposition federation dedicated to "the total emancipation of the working class."

France's wave of strikes, which approached a general walkout at one time when three million men were estimated to be idle, ended nine days ago after a month of strife, when the CGT called off the stoppages in the face of strong anti-strike and anti-sabotage legis-

Father of Joined Twins Asks Operation at Risk of Two Lives

Indianapolis, Dec. 19 (AP).—The father of Siamese twins born three weeks ago said today he would rather risk their deaths in an operation to separate them than have them live joined.

Edward R. Speer, 31, an accountant, said he would demand an operation to separate the twin boys "even if there is only one chance in a million of it succeeding."

"I'll insist on it," he said.

But doctors said there hardly was a chance the babies could be separated without death for both. They said no surgeon would operate because of professional ethics even if Speer did insist.

The twins, still unnamed and labeled "A" and "B" by hospital attendants are joined at the top of their skulls so that their feet extend in opposite directions. Doctors said that if the twins lived they would not be able to walk or sit up.

"We can't leave them as they are," Speer said. "I don't see how we could take care of them. It would mean hiring a full-time nurse and we don't have that kind of money."

He had hoped the babies could be placed in a State institution, but physicians said there was no Indiana institution for such cases.

Meanwhile, in James Whitcomb Riley Hospital for Children here, the babies were gaining weight taking their milk formula like normal infants.

Seeks NLRB Election

GSI Moves to Force Filing Of Red Affidavits by Union

Government Services, Inc., yesterday moved to force the CIO cafeteria workers union to file non-Communist affidavits by calling for an NLRB election.

The action appeared to bring closer the possibility of a strike when the union's contract covering employes in 43 cafeterias expires on December 31.

Oliver T. Palmer, business agent and chairman of the negotiations committee of Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers, CIO, said the GSI action does not change his union's position.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, no union can appear on a ballot in an election conducted by the NLRB unless the union has submitted non-Communist affidavits and agreed to publish financial statements.

Local 471 has done neither, calling GSI efforts to bring such action "a smokescreen to evade its obligations to the workers."

Terming GSI's petition for an NLRB election a "desperate grasping at vanishing straws," Palmer quoted a letter sent by Robert N. Denham, National Labor Relations Board general counsel, to CIO general counsel Lee Pressman.

The letter, released in New York Thursday, declared that under the Taft-Hartley Act, Remington Rand,

Only Definition Of Drunkenness Is Rather Flat

Bench and bar participating in the Pearce unlawful arrest trial yesterday agreed there is no legal definition for "drunkenness."

District Court Justice Jennings Bailey, however, remembered a line from an old, anonymous quatrain dealing with the subject, and Defense Counsel Francis B. Brooke rose to the occasion by reciting the rest.

The poetic definition:

"He is not drunk who from the floor
"Can rise again and ask for more.
"But drunk is he who prostrate lies
"And cannot either drink or rise."

Next Few Months Are Vital To Europe, Marshall Says

posal the western powers agreed upon at London.

"The Soviet Union has recognized the situation in its frank declaration of hostility and opposition to the European recovery program," he said.

"The success of such a program would necessarily mean the establishment of a balance in which the 16 western nations, who have bound their hopes and efforts together, would be rehabilitated—strong in forms of government which guarantee true freedom, opportunity to the individual, and protection against the terror of governmental tyranny."

As he did on his return from Moscow last spring, Secretary Marshall devoted most of his radio time to a patient report of the Foreign Ministers' disagreements. He did not try to hide his disappointment at the lack of agreement on any fundamental issue in London.

Confusing to Public

"I realized," he said, "that the many lengthy statements and the frequent and fundamental disagreements were very confusing to the general public.

"Also, the continuous accusations against the good faith, the integrity and the purposes of the governments of the western powers, particularly the United States, necessarily added greatly to the confusion. This was, as a matter of fact, one of the purposes of the attacks.

"I anticipated great difficulty in reaching a comprehensive agreement, but I did have a hope that we might take three or four fundamental decisions which would permit immediate action by the four powers to alleviate the situation in Germany this winter and greatly improve the prospect for all of Europe.

"That we failed to reach any such agreements is the greatest disappointment."

The American delegation, he said, went to London determined to bring the division of Germany to an end, but the only result was "a dreary repetition of what had been said and resaid at the Moscow conference."

He described the efforts of the western delegation at London to consider the Austrian treaty first and economic unity of Germany next. The Russians, however, insisted on giving priority to the mechanism of a German peace conference, with the result, the Secretary said, that "it was not until after 10 days of meetings that the conference really reached the heart of the German question."

In those 10 days, he said, there arose only one question of "real substance" affecting the immediate situation in Germany—namely, present and future German frontiers. The three western delegations wanted frontier commissions set up to study the question, but Foreign Minister Molotov refused to agree.

Impossible to Reconcile

"It was impossible for me," said the Secretary last night, "to reconcile his urgent insistence upon the necessity of expediting the preparation for a German peace treaty with his categoric refusal to agree to the appointment of boundary commissions which three delegations considered to be an absolutely essential first step in any serious preparation for a future German peace settlement."

Next, he went on, Molotov insisted on the immediate establishment of a central German government; the western powers argued that "until the division of Germany had been healed and conditical and economic unity, any centions created for German polititral government would be a sham and not a reality."

That this was "completely unacceptable" to Molotov "was the first clear evidence of his purpose portunity for propaganda declara- to utilize the meeting as an options which would be pleasant to Germa nears," the Secretary said.

The sole Austrian issue discussed at London, he went on, was the determination of what were the true German assets in eastern Austria to which Russia was fully entitled by the Potsdam agreement.

Apparently Willing to Yield

This issue, the Secretary said, "would determine whether or not Austria would be under such complete domination by the Soviet Union that it would be virtually a vassal state." At first Molotov rejected a proposed French compromise; in the last hour of the last session he indicated "an apparent willingness" to yield, and this matter was referred to the deputies to await a detailed Soviet proposition.

The Secretary then reviewed the London discussions of what he called "the harsh realities of the existing situation in Germany."

"The general issue was simple," he said. "It was whether or not Germany was to continue divided or whether the Allies could agree to re-create a unified Germany. Unless this could be achieved, all other questions relating to Germany would remain academic."

He outlined again the American contention that artificial zonal barriers must be wiped out, that German properties seized "under the guise of reparations without four-power agreement" be given up, that a new and sound currency be introduced for all Germany, that Germany's future economic burdens be determined and that an over-all export-import plan for all Germany be approved.

Not until all these things had been done, the Secretary said, could a provisional government be set up for all German.

Emerge as Key Issue

But reparations quickly emerged as a key issue, he went on. He recalled that the Potsdam conference had agreed to take reparations in the form of surplus capital goods instead of from current production, so that Germany could become self-supporting again.

"In other words, reparations from current production—that is, exports of day-to-day German production with no return—could be made only if the countries at present supplying Germany—notably the United States—foot the bill," he explained.

"We put in and the Russians take out.

"This economic truth, however, is only one aspect of Soviet reparations claims. In the eastern zone of Germany the Soviet Union has been taking reparations from current production and has also, under the guise of reparations, seized vast holdings and formed them into a gigantic trust embracing a substantial part of the industry of that zone.

"This has resulted in a type of monopolistic stranglehold over the economic and political life of eastern Germany which makes that region little more than a dependent province of the Soviet Union.

Wouldn't Relax Hold

"A very strong reason, in my opinion, for our failure to agree at London was the Soviet determination not to relax in any way its hold on eastern Germany. Acceptance of their claims for reparations from current production from the western zones would extend that stranglehold over the future economic life of all Germany.

"The Soviet position was nowhere more clearly indicated than by Mr. Molotov's categoric refusal to furnish the Council of Foreign Ministers with information concerning the reparations already taken from the eastern zone, or indeed any information at all concerning the situation there, until full agreements had been reached.

"In effect we were to tell them what has occurred in the western zones, which we had already done, and they tell us nothing. That refusal to provide information absolutely essential for decisions as to the organization of German unity would by itself have made any agreement impossible.

Cites Carping Criticism

"A remarkable illustration of the Soviet position in this matter was their carping criticism of the economic procedure in our zones which we freely furnish for the world to read, while virtually in the same breath blandly refusing to provide any data at all concerning their zone.

"It finally became clear that we could make no progress at this time—that there was no apparent will to reach a settlement but only an interest in making more and more speeches intended for another audience. So I suggested that we adjourn.

"No real ground was lost or gained at the meeting, except that the outlines of the problems and the obstacles are much clearer. We cannot look forward to a united Germany at this time. We must do the best we can in the area where our influence can be felt."

lation obtained by the government of Premier Robert Schuman.

Wage Increase Won

Although the Communists claimed a victory in the increase of the minimum monthly wage from 7000 francs ($58) to 10,000 francs ($87), 800 francs short of their demands, their communique said the workers were going back to their jobs "with death in their hearts."

One of the terms of the settlement was a government promise to formulate an economic policy to balance wages and prices.

The cabinet today completed that program, and Rene Mayer, Finance Minister, presented it to the National Assembly.

Designed to halt inflation, the program called for stiffer taxes to siphon off surplus spending power, and a 1948 balanced budget except for 230 billion francs (about two billion dollars) spent for reconstruction and re-equipment the past year.

U. S. Aid Expected

Mayer indicated a large part of the program was based on the assumption American interim and Marshall Plan aid would be received.

The government asked approval for an extraordinary profits tax on corporations and farmers, and a heavy income tax on persons with a yearly income of more than 750,000 francs (about $6250) to cover most of the 1947 reconstruction expenses.

Mayer said the government would tax night clubs and "loafers" heavily.

He said government controls would be lifted from several sectors of French economy, but would be maintained on basic products such as iron and coal.

Lilienthal Warns of Danger In Using Atom for Coercion

David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, warned yesterday against engaging in an international contest to inspire fear of the atomic bomb.

"You cannot outbid other people when it comes to fear," he told a meeting of the National Committee on Atomic Information. "There is always somebody who is more irresponsible than you are and who can scare people even more terribly, and his remedies may appeal to people in panic."

Lilienthal pointed out that reiteration of the fear theme would lead to panic which, in turn, would breed apathy as a means of escape. He had, he said, little confidence anyway in "a great and tragic fear" as a means of inducing people to do right.

"Scaring the daylights out of people," he emphasized, "is not an effective way of reching a determination of this problem that will be satisfying."

Lilienthal decried propaganda which prescribed the doom of humanity as the alternative to a complete change in human institutions within a limited period. This, he declared, was "utter rot and nonsense" because "we all know that human institutions do not change by any such time schedules."

"What we do know," he said, "is that we have here a very great fundamental force, comparable to gravity, magnetism and under the forces of electricity, and that it has many profound implications and that we, all of us, have to learn a great deal about it; not about the scientific details, by any means, but about the general implications for life, and a sense of understanding and a feeling for what this is all about."

He praised a report of the Prince Georges, Md., Atomic Energy Week as an example of the pattern atomic education may assume. He said:

"This is an extraordinary story that can be repeated in other sections of the country where such undertakings have gone forward. It is very impressive indeed to see how, within a county, mechanisms of education in a subject as difficult as this and as fraught with so many complexities can be handled in an intelligent and effective way."

Sumner T. Pike, a member of the Atomic Commission, told the committee the atom could become a "political weapon" and declared this should be prevented. The spread of atomic information to all citizens he said was the best means of preventing the issues from becoming political.

At a luncheon session, Philip Morrison of the physics department of Cornell University said such organizations as the information committee were necessary, since all changes in public opinion occurred in groups. Morrison, who was introduced by Alfred Friendly of The Washington Post staff, said there must be a change in opinion about atomic energy if war was to be avoided. War, he added, was no solution but an admission of failure.

New Shutdown For Distillers

will begin not later than Tuesday. At least three days are, necessary for fermentation of the mash before distilling.

When negotiations began early in October leading to the shutdown, Charles Luckman, chairman of the food group, reported that the distillers had promised not to increase their operations pending the holiday.

Distilleries Running

Records of the Alcohol Tax Unit published early in December revealed that many distilleries had operated at full capacity in October. In September only 4,269,000 bushels of grain were consumed by the industry, and in August only 2,269,000 bushels of grain were 2,988,000. Annual normal consumption is 55 million bushels, about 4,600,000 bushels a month.

Under Anderson's plan, with a shutdown all through December, and a limitation to only 2,500,000 bushels in January, a total saving will result of more than than 14 million bushels of grain in those two months compared with a year ago.

Anderson this week asked the distillers voluntarily to reduce their monthly consumption to 2,500,000 bushels for the next three months. One group offered a compromise plan calling for 3,500,000 bushels. Both plans were voted down by the industry, although at the same time it approved food conservation.

body to reveal the names have not been decided. He wasn't sure, he said, whether the meeting will be held before Congress convenes again January 6.

An effort by a group of Republicans, headed by Representative Clare Hoffman, to amend the resolution failed by a vote of 89 to 41. Hoffman wanted to include a provision requiring the Secretary of the Treasury and the Internal Revenue Bureau to furnish all House committees, upon request, with income tax returns.

He was supported by Representative Andresen (R., Minn.), chairman of the newly named House committee set up to investigate alleged speculating by Government officials or other "insiders" in commodities.

Named to the committee with Andresen were Representatives Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.), Howard H. Buffett (R., Nebr.), Mitchell Jenkins (R., Penn.), John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), Albert Rains (D., Ala.), and John A. Carroll (D., Colo.).

In supporting the Hoffman amendment, Andresen said the privilege of viewing the tax returns of persons under investigation would be "very helpful" to his committee.

The Hoffman amendment met stiff opposition from both parties.

The House action ended in a victory for Anderson over a row begun when the Senate Appropriations Committee subpenaed him to produce the list.

Anderson refused point-blank Thursday a committee request that he furnish the list to the committee in secrecy. He argued that the law prohibited revealing the list, and that the "easiest way" to get it out would be by joint resolution.

The row began two weeks ago, when the Senate Committee ended an inquiry into Army policies in occupied areas with a demand that all Army officials and employes in a position to know of Army purchases make a statement of their market operations.

The next day Harold E. Stassen, candidate for Republican nomination for President, revealed that he had asked Edwin W. Pauley, special assistant to Secretary of the Army Royall, about Pauley's market speculations.

Later Pauley testified that he had "done very well" in speculation in grain, cottonseed oil, hides and lard.

At the Agriculture Department last night it was stated that the list being prepared will contain the names of "big" traders in futures in 21 commodities during 1946-1947.

It also will contain the names of traders who had holdings on "certain market days" when the Commodity Exchange Authority made special surveys of all accounts.

Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee which tried to force Anderson to produce the lists under subpena, named Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) chairman of a special subcommittee, to get the names from Anderson.

Truman Asks 17-Billion Fund For 4 Years of Aid to Europe

that began in mid-November. Only 22 Representatives—half Republicans and half Democrats—were in the House chamber as Reading Clerk George Maurer began reading Mr. Truman's fateful but unexciting message. Even fewer Senators, a half dozen or so, listened at the other end of the Capitol. The galleries were virtually empty.

Hardly anybody doubted that the European Recovery Program, in some form, would be translated into law. The first comment, however, indicated that the program that Mr. Inman submitted yesterday was in for a battle when Congress comes back after the new year.

Mr. Truman's proposal that Congress commit the United States to a four-year program came under fire immediately.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), powerful chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, said that he would do all that he could to hold both authorizations and actual appropriations to a a year-to-year basis.

"I don't think Congress should commit itself in advance to any four-year program," Taft said.

The Ohioan added that he would reserve comment on the amount until he had a chance to study the detailed figures.

Foolhardy, Ball Says

Senator Ball (R., Minn.) said it would be "foolhardy" for the United States to promise 17 billion dollars, and he said the country certainly couldn't afford to spend $6,800,000,000 on Europe next year.

However, Senator White of Maine, the Republican floor leader, expressed the belief that Congress would uphold Mr. Truman's program.

"My guess is," White said, "that when the showdown comes the President's figures will be pretty substantially sustained, even if reluctantly."

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said that if Congress approves a four-year plan Europe will regard that "as an absolute pledge that we will put up 17 billion dollars and that they don't have to do anything to help themselves."

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) president of the Senate and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said his committee would begin "exhaustive" hearings on the program January 7, the day after Congress opens its regular session.

Vandenberg, chief GOP spokesman in matters of foreign policy, declined to comment on Mr. Truman's message. He said "I've not participated in putting it together and I will withhold final judgment pending final facts."

Favors Initial 15-Month Limit

Senator Smith (R., N. J.) a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he was "strongly" for the principle of the Marshall Plan and thought it was "the answer to the threat of World War III." But he, too, favored limiting the American commitment to an initial 15-month period and then congressional action on a year-to-year basis if the programs are working satisfactorily.

Senator Lodge (R., Mass.) likewise a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said: "I am going to study it with tremendous care and I am prepared to ask 50 questions."

Senator Barkley (D., Ky.), Democratic leader of the Senate, said he thought the amount was "conservative" for a four-year period.

"By every process of screening the over-all amount has been reduced to a reasonable figure," Barkley said. "I sincerely hope that after giving it serious consideration, Congress will adopt the plan without undue delay and without material change."

Could Be Repudiated

In Chicago, Senator Lucas (D., Ill.), minority whip, declared: "No Congress can bind a future Congress, but it could lay down a four-year plan, and if the Eighty-first Congress wanted to repudiate it, it could.

"I am confident, however, that we must take the gamble on rehabilitating these 16 nations who want to cooperate with us on world recovery."

President Truman, in his message, anticipated an outcry against the sum recommended, saying:

"While the burden on our people should not be ignored or minimized, neither should it be exaggerated. The program of aid to Europe which I am recommending is well within our capacity to undertake.

"Its total cost, though large, will be only about 5 per cent of the cost of our effort in the recent war.

"It will cost less than 3 per cent of our national income during the life of the program.

"As an investment toward the peace and security of the world and toward the realization of hope and confidence in a better way of life for the future, this cost is small indeed."

In asking Congress to create an Economic Cooperation Administration, which would handle the recovery program, Mr. Truman followed the advice of Secretary of State Marshall. The Herter Committee in the House had suggested a Government corporation, with a board made up of four Republicans and four Democrats.

Must Work Closely

Mr. Truman said that the Economic Cooperation Administration, in initiating the program project by project and nation by nation, will have to work closely with established departments such as State, Commerce and Agriculture. He thought that the facilities of some of these old-line departments might have to be strengthened in some cases, but that no major change in the governmental organization would be necessary.

He expressed the belief, therefore, that the economic cooperation would need only a small staff.

"It is essential to realize," Mr. Truman told Congress, "that this program is much more than a commercial operation. It represents a major segment of our foreign policy . . . We shall be dealing with a number of countries in which there are complex and widely varying economic and political situations . . . Its administration must therefore be fully responsive to our foreign policy.

"The administrator must be subject to the direction of the Secretary of State on decisions and actions affecting our foreign policy."

Mr. Truman recommended that the Administrator and the "United States representative in Europe," the $25,000-a-year roving ambassador, be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Asks 60 Assistants

He further recommended that the administrator, in addition to having a $17,500 deputy, be given as his top assistants 10 men making up to $15,000 a year and 50 more making as much as $10,000.

The Chief Executive, in another of his recommendations, opposed the view of the United States Maritime Commission. That agency insisted that this country needed all of its surplus ships for its own security and argued against selling or transferring any of them to the nations of Europe. However, Mr. Truman sided with State and Commerce officials, who said that the United States could not supply Europe with steel to make ships for itself. He recommended the sale and transfer of 500 American vessels to countries abroad.

Faces Grave Decision

Mr. Truman told Congress that the United States was faced with "a grave and significnt decision"—whether it will complete the job of helping the free nations of Europe to recover from the devastation of war.

"Considered in terms of our own economy," he said, "European recovery is essential. The last two decades have taught us the bitter lesson that no economy, not even one so strong as our own, can remain healthy and prosperous in a world of poverty and want. . . .

"Our deepest concern with European recovery, however, is that it is essential to the maintenance of the civilization in which the American way of life is rooted. . . .

"The next few years can determine whether the free countries of Europe will be able to preserve their heritage of freedom.

Possible Result of Failure

"If Europe fails to recover, the peoples of those countries might be driven to the philosophy of despair—the philosophy which contends that their basic wants can be met only by the surrender of their basic rights to totalitarian control.

"Such a turn of events would constitute a shattering blow to peace and stability in the world. It might well compel us to modify our own security, the enjoyment of many of our freedoms and privileges . . ."

He said that the United States was the only country in the world able to give Europe the aid it needed, although others could help.

"The program," he said, "is well within our capacity to undertake. But it will require some self-denial by all Americans."

He said that extensive study had been given during recent months to the question of relief and rehabilitation in China, and he promised Congress to make recommendmations at the next regular session.

Mr. Truman's message, with its supporting documents, was expected to bring another blast from Russian propagandists. This would not disturbe the Administration. Much of the favorable sentiment for the ERP on Capitol Hill can be traced to the vituperation of Vishinsky and other Soviet orators.

Anti-Inflation Measure . . .

BILL SIGNED—House Speaker Joseph Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) puts his name on the anti-inflation bill, passed yesterday by Congress and sent to the President. CONGRESS—From Pg. 1

Congress Votes Curbs, Quits

gress his largest order—the long-awaited call for a four-year, 17-billion-dollar Marshall plan for European recovery. In the adjournment rush only a handful on both sides of the Capitol heard it read.

First order of business awaiting the returning Congress, it had to run the same 1948 election gantlet that played hob with interim aid and price control proposals in the session just ended.

The abreviated stopgap relief appropriation moved up and down in its aid totals on its last fast lap to the White House—up from the House-approved 500-million-dollar figure to a Senate-passed 568 million outlay, with China added. In less than an hour's dickering, conferees had it shaved again to 540 million, with China still in.

Addition of China aid, which helped open the gate for western Europe cuts, threatened the program with one last upset just before the curtain dropped. Only an urgent leadership plea to homeward-bound members to hold a quorum prevented a session-end tie-up.

Posed by Marcantonio

The threat was posed by Representative Vito Marcantonio, New York's left-wing American laborite, as the House sent the aid bill to conference. If conferees recommended funds for China, Marcantonio warned, he would resort to "House rules" to put members on record.

This was one way of saying that, lacking a quorum, the House couldn't put the bill through. Hopping trains and planes out of town, members already had depleted the voting margin. Minority Leader Sam Rayburn and Majority Leader Halleck appealed to members to remain "within hearing" of the chamber. A test quorum call was made and 285 responded, 67 over a quorum.

When conferees reported the agreement, with China down for 18 million, Marcantonio demanded a standing vote. Speaker Martin's count was 233 to 2 for the conference compromise, just 17 over a quorum. Marcantonio shrugged and sat down. The bill was passed.

Who voted with Marcantonio was a minor mystery last night. Reporters thought they saw isolationist Representative Harold Knutson (R., Minn.) rise, but Knutson said he voted for the report. Speaker Martin said he "wasn't sure" if a second party rose but made the count "two" to be safe.

The final foreign aid agreement did more than add China and cut back the interim relief and occupied area totals.

Wheat Restriction Restored

A House restriction, rigidly requiring maintenance of a 150-million-bushel carry-over of wheat in this country, regardless of interim aid needs, was restored to full force. The Senate had given the President discretion to tap the carry-over for foreign aid purposes down to 125 million bushels.

A House 50-million- dollar limit on the amount of CCC surpluses that could be sold below parity to feed Europe had been raised to 65 million dollars by the Senate. Conferees pruned this back to a 57½-million-dollar limit.

Inc., could enter into a contract with the CIO United Electrical Workers, which also has not filed non-Communist affidavits.

Denham's Declaration

Denham declared, however, that if the contract included a union security provision the company would be entering into the contract "at their peril."

Palmer declared that his union would be in a similar position, for Remington Rand sought an election before the NLRB and the petition was denied because the union had not filed the necessary affidavits.

Palmer said, "Our union members know a lot more about the financial situation in their union than the Government or anyone else has been able to learn about GSI's books."

He said there will be a full membership meeting of the union at 8 p. m. Tuesday at Shiloh Baptist Church.

Statement by Grant

Announcement of the petition for an NLRB election was accompanied by a statement from Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, president of GSI.

"The corporation has doubted the union's claim of representation ever since last year's negotiations when its employes repudiated an agreement signed by union officials. That repudiation resulted in a strike," he declared.

"Our decision to petition the NLRB came as a result of the claim of these same union officials that our employes, on December 12, voted to support them in their refusal to sign non-Communist affidavits and file financial statements.

"We have definite information," said General Grant, "that only a small fraction of our workers were present at that meeting.

Chicago Printers, Newspapers, Mayor Confer

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP).—Leaders of the striking AFL-Chicago Typographical Union Local 16 and members of the Chicago Publishers Association today discussed their dispute for three hours in the office of Mayor Martin H. Kennelly.

At the conclusion, the mayor said, "none of the questions was resolved," but there was an encouraging atmosphere" and participants agreed to talk things over again with Kennelly present next Tuesday.

Today's conference was the second sponsored by the mayor in an effort to settle the printers' strike against six Chicago newspapers which began November 24.

year—already predicted by the Prospects for less pork next Department of Agriculture—were apparent in a Government survey of the 1948 pig crop.

The Department said the survey indicates the 1948 crop will total about 48 million head, or 9 per cent smaller than this year's spring crop. The Government goal was 50 million head.

The coming spring pig crop will furnish pork supply for the fall and winter of 1948-1949.

Premier Resigns, Iran, Reds Clash

Tehran, Iran, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Sardar Fakher Hekmat, speaker of the Majlis (parliament), abandaned his attempts to form a cabinet today and resigned the premiership, amid newspaper reports that Soviet and Iranian forces were clashing along the northern border.

The Tehran newspaper Mosavar reported the Iranian-Russian frontier clashes, which were not confirmed.

The breakdown of the Big Four Foreign Ministers Conference and fear of Soviet retaliation caused deep despondency in Iranian official circles. It overshadowed Hekmat's failure to form a new cabinet to replace the government of Ahmead Ghavam Es-Sultaneh, who resigned. Hekmat had held the premiership only three days.

Gen. Grant Urges 'Governor' As Director of City's Rule

staff, would keep continual oversight on District affairs.

2. Either House of Congress could veto basic legislation adopted by the Council.

3. The President could veto council actions if Congress did not do it first.

4. Congress would keep the right power to repeal or change the home rule charter.

5. While the District would take from the National Capital Park and Planning Commission authority for city land purchases, the purchases would have to conform as far as possible to master plans for District development of the NCPPC.

6. The Federal contribution to District activities, said Galloway, would also protect the national interest here.

Jesse Suter, veteran civic affairs writer for the Washington Star and a member of the Washington Board of Trade subcommittee studying the Auchincloss plan, said he still favored national representation for the District as the first step to self-government.

Suter said he was neither advocating nor opposing the Auchincloss plan.

Miss Blanche Hoylett asked Suter "what about the Negro element" under home rule.

"I think I'd trust our own colored population with the vote as soon as anyone else," said Suter. "I don't fear them at all. Their right to vote is in the Constitution. I've sworn on occasions to uphold and defend the constitution, and I'll stand on that."

General Grant, emphasizing that he was speaking as a private citizen, stated:

"I believe the Auchincloss plan does not give the tie-in there should be between the District and the executive branch of the Federal Government."

General Grant said afterwards the governor could fit into the council-manager scheme. He said the local council would be elected, as in the Auchincloss plan, but the appointed governor would be chief executive, and the city manager would be a hired man under the governor.

Grant urged, too, that the water supply system for the District, the Federal parks in the District and the land purchase powers of his office be left in Federal control, instead of under District control as proposed in the Auchincloss plan. He said the National Capital Housing Authority should remain Federal instead of being placed under the District council.

Defends Present Setup

General Grant warmly defended the present setup wherein city public works are under an Army officer detailed as District Engineer Commissioner, now Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young.

General Grant also protested the Auchincloss proposal to transfer the park police to District control as part of a unified police force under a Department of Public Safety. "The Metropolitan Police here for 30 or 40 years were supposed to police the parks," he said, "and it just didn't work out."

Grant charged, too, that the overhead cost of District government would be sharply increased with a $25,000 city manager and other high-priced officials.

On this point, Dr. Galloway said the subcommittee had estimated that the home rule plan would save District taxpayers about a million dollars a year. This saving would be offset by a slightly greater increase in cost to the Federal Government.

Dr. Galloway added that there would be considerable economy by streamlining the "patchwork, tangled, hodgepodge present setup."

Sanitation Plan Urged At McLean

Advantages of creating a sanitary district were described by speakers at a meeting in the McLean (Va.) Elementary School attended by about 75 local citizens last night.

Col. Claudse Smith of the citizens committee, which has urged creation of the sanitary district, outlined the procedure by which it could be established and said it would enable inhabitants of the 7-mile square area to set up their own water and sewage systems and provide increased protection from fire.

The committee, in consulting with G. Hubard Massey, engineer, believed the initial cost would be about $1,700,000. On the basis of past population trends, the cost of the system would liquidate itself within 50 years at the most, it was stated.

James J. Corbalis, county sanitary engineer, told the group it had been his experience that creation of sanitary districts paved the way for increases in population, better roads and better schools.

Complete reading and final approval on the document will be given at a meeting of the council on Monday night, when citizens and civic groups will have an opportunity to make requests for further changes.

City Attorney W. E. Moore began work on the charter after annexation proceedings were completed in Circuit Court last June. The document will come before the Virginia General Assembly for final adoption early in January.

The new charter is basically the same as the present one, which was revised in 1928 when Waynesboro went over to a city manager system. Provisions are made in the document for certain municipal officers and erection of a court system.

Tobacco Crop In Va. Drops 10% Under '46

Richmond, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—The Virginia tobacco crop this year dropped 10 per cent under the 1946 record production and in dollar value is expeected to run about 16 per cent below last year, the Virginia Cooperative Crop Reporting Service has announced.

The tobacco crop for all types of leaf in 1946 had a total value of $75,533,000. The crop service said and forecast that this year's crop probably would bring $62,873,000.

In estimating the value of the 1947 crop, the service hinted that this is in every sense a "forecast" with estimates based on figures during the remainder of the marketing season.

It also was emphasized that the flue-cured crop is the only one for which figures are anywhere near complete. Fire-cured, burley and sun-cured markets only recently started their sales seasons.

Acreage for all types of tobacco this year was figured at 143,400, compared with 147,900 in 1946; yield per acre for the respective years was put at 1124 and 1209 pounds. Production during 1946 amounted to 178,821,000 pounds and the forecast for the 1947 crop is 161,112,000 pounds.

Lacy Reports Estimated Surplus Gain of $2,344,875

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 19 (AP).—Comptroller James J. Lacy announced today the estimated surplus of the State at the end of the fiscal year next June 30 as $12,867,357, an increase of $2,344,875 over the previous estimate.

At the same time Lacy reported revenues for November totaled $10,387,046 compared to $6,761,102 for the same month last year.

Disbursements during November totaled $6,920,856 against $5,313,014 for November 1946.

Lacy explained that the revised estimate of surplus was prepared because of the special session of the legislature.

Corn Yield Sets 80-Year Record in Va.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—The big four of Virginia's cash crops this year were corn, tobacco, hay and peanuts, the state cooperative crop reporting service disclosed today.

The agency's annual report said the value of the 1947 corn crop was $98,762,000 although the acreage planted to corn was the second smallest in the past 80 years. The yield, however, was at a record high of 38 bushels per acre.

Tobacco was valued at $62,873,000.

Peanut acreage of 162,000 equaled the record and the growers are expected to receive $22,118,000. The third-place hay crop of 1,438,000 tons was valued at $33,793,000.

Wheat was next in line among the State's money crops with the 8,522,000 bushels' production valued at $21,305,000.

The 1947 apple crop, among the leaders in money value in 1946, dropped sharply this year after production was cut 61 per cent by weather damage. The value was set at $9,770,000 compared with the 1946 value of $24,911,000.

Walter Johnson's Dairy Herd Disposed of at Auction Sale

A valuable dairy herd which was one of the late Walter Johnson's main interests in his declining years was sold at public auction yesterday on the famed pitcher's 550-acre farm near Germantown, Md.

Anxious bidders by the hundreds, with plenty of cash, left between 25 and 30 thousand dollars with the auctioneer as they departed in their separate ways with about 115 head of Johnson's purebred Holsteins and Guernseys.

Born on a Kansas farm where his father maintained a dairy herd, the former baseball idol of millions never lost interest in farming. In 1935, he purchased the large Montgomery County farm and soon thereafter began collecting the valuable herd with loving and expert care.

Top price for one of Johnson's bulls was $900 paid by Joseph Cohen of Bel Air, Md. The top price for a cow was $820 and an hour-old calf sold for $105.

Terms of the sale were cash or certified check and registry papers of the blood animals were furnished free of charge.

Officiating at the sale attended by farmers and dairy owners from all over Maryland and parts of Virginia was Edward R. Johnson, son of the late baseball hero. Johnson said he had been active in management of the herd since 1939.

The large farm with its rolling acres was sold recently to A. B. McKee, of Rockville, and yesterday's livestock auction completed disposal of the estate. Farm machinery and other stocks were sold at auction Thursday.

Hitch Found In Funds for Negro School

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP).—A new way must be found to finance construction of two new buildings for Negro Princess Anne College.

Attorney General Hall Hammond told the Board of Public Works today that paying for the structures by a merger of two appropriations under the 1947 general construction bond bill was not feasible.

The board approved the plan yesterday. The projects—a science building and a dormitory—will cost $347,000.

Construction is to begin immediately, and President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland, parent institution of the Somerset County Negro college, said he expected the buildings would be completed by next September, with supplemental funds from student fees.

Under the 1947 appropriation, $200,000 was allowed for the dormitory, and $150,000 for the science building. When the lowest bid for the dormitory exceeded $200,000, and the low bid for the other building fell short of the sum allowed, Dr. Byrd proposed combining the appropriations.

"It is our opinion," Hammond ruled, "that the Board of Public Works may not authorize the combination of the two appropriations. They are separate and distinct, and each represents the maximum that maybe spent from the proceeds of the authorized bond issue.'

He said the opinion did not deny the board authority to approve a dormitory costing more than $200,000, but that the excess would have to come from a source other than the general construction bond issue.

TEEN-AGE BRIDES and their husbands—Pauline Anderson Tyndall, 14; Milton Tyndall; Frances Anderson Swanner, 16, and Floyd Swanner (from left)—are reunited in a court appearance in Norfolk, Va. They departed to resume interrupted honeymoons yesterday when the girls were released in bond of $500 each after delinquency charges against the sisters were continued in Juvenile Court

'Teen Bride's Mother May Drop Charges

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—The mother of two teen-age brides, who returned happily to their husbands wit hthe temporary sanction of the Juvenile Court, apparently underwent a change of heart today.

"I think I will withdraw the delinquency charges against my daughters and the contributing to delinquency charges against the men they married," said Mrs. Callie Anderson.

However, she declined to say whether she planned to withdraw a memorandum filed in Circuit Court seeking to have the marriages annulled. She said she would see her attorney tomorrow and would follow his advice on whether the delinquency charges should be withdrawn.

The girls, Pauline, 14, and Frances, 16, were released in bond of $500 each when the delinquency charges against them were continued in Juvenile Court until January 23 and departed to resume interrupted honeymoons with Milton Tyndall, 24, and Floyd Swanner, 21.

Pauline married Tyndall and Frances married Swanner on December 5 at Moyock, N. C. Five days later Mrs. Anderson charged that Swanner and Tyndall had contributed to the delinquency of her minor daughters by marrying them.

Court Martial Awaits Kelly At Camp Lee

Camp Lee, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—The commanding general of Camp Lee has been advised that Capt. Edward P. Kelly does not require further hospitalization and is being returned here to face Army Court Martial charges, Lieut. Col. K. W. Dalton, inspector general and public information officer, said today.

Kelly, who walked away from Camp Lee with the pay checks of 37 fellow officers at the quartermaster school, surrendered to military authorities in New York last Monday and later was moved to Valley Forge General Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa., where medical officers reported him to be in a "mentally depressed" condition.

Charges against the officer, whose promotion from a 1st lieutenant to captain became effective while he was a fugitive, are being prepared and will include offenses on which there is supporting evidence, Dalton said. The FBI had charged Kelly with emezzlement.

Kelly left Camp Lee, December 1, after being designated to pick up the pay for his fellow officers. When he didn't return they made a check and found he had left the post. Three checks, including Kelly's own, were cashed at a Petersburg bank, and the remaining 35 were mailed back to camp from Richmond the following day.

Reshuffling Of Frederick Police Planned

Frederick, Md., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—Action to strengthen discipline and raise standards of the police department here will be taken shortly after the first of the year, according to Mayor Lloyd C. Culler.

Culler's statement came after a conference between the City Police Commission and the Board of Aldermen last night. The conference followed four months of investigation of charges against two superior officers on the force.

In a written statement, the commission stated that "morale of the force is at a low ebb and the testimony at recent hearings of charges against Chief Fred Straley and Lieut. Reno Six indicated that there is very little, if any, discipline in the force."

In the investigation, the commission absolved Straley and found evidence against Six insufficient to be sustained.

The statement further said that members of the force "show little, if any, respect for their superior officers, especialy the chief of police." They charged some members of the force "handled the truth very lightly" and said the radio log was so inaccurately kept that it could not be used for evidence.

"There are a number of honest men on the force, that if given an opportunity would make policemen of which Frederick would be proud," the report concluded.

Stand Yule Tree In Water as Fire Guard, State Urges

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—The best way to keep your Christmas tree from catching fire, according to Virginia Agricultural Extension Service, is to stand it in plain water from the time you bring it home until you throw it away.

This, it was stated, actually reduces fire hazard more than standing it in fire retardant chemicals and in addition keeps the needles fresh and green.

The recommended method is to select a tree cut as recently as possible, cut about an inch diagonally off the bottom of the trunk, and place it at once in a container of water, keeping the edges of the cut below water level.

Even when one of the several types of fire retardant coatings are applied to the wood itself, it was recommended that water treatment be used as well for the additional protection of moisture in the tree.

Boy, 'Abducted' in Warren, And Father Land in Britain

Lawyers Present Custodian Letter At London Airport

London, Dec. 19 (AP).—Six-year-old Robin Montgomerie-Charrington, reported missing Monday from his mother's home in Warrenton, Va., arrived here today with his English father.

The boy and his father, Robert Montgomerie-Charrington, a former British army officer, left a British Overseas Airways plane hand in hand at London Airport and were met by his uncle Henry.

Solicitors handed the father a letter at the airport. He would not discuss circumstances that prompted him to bring the boy from Warrenton, where his mother had reported their disappearance to police

Robin, his father and his uncle were reportedly bound for the boy's great grandmother's house in Hertfordshire. Tonight the grandmother said they were "somewhere in London."

"After all, Robert is English and he brought his son home to be brought up in the English way of life," she said.

Getting off the plane, Robin looked sleepy but cheerful. In one hand he clutched a toy tractor.

On the transatlantic trip from Montreal, he made a good friend—Mrs. Margaret Gladys Lambert, county organizer of the women's voluntary services of Southampton, who had been lecturing in Canada.

Mrs. Lambert told reporters Robin is "a delightful little boy" and his father a "perfectly charming man."

"I talked a long time to both of them, and obviously the boy was very fond of his father," she said. "They were great pals."

A $408,025 contract to grade a proposed extension of the George Washington Memorial Parkway in Arlington has been awarded by the Public Roads Administration.

The grading contract went to the Nello Teer Co. of Durham, N. C., according to a PRA announcement.

As now planned, the four-lane divided highway will run under Key Bridge for a mile and a half to Lorcum Lane, thereby providing communities beyond that area with speedy, direct passage to Memorial Bridge and Washington.

Public Roads Administration officials pointed out that the long delay in awarding the contract was caused by the submission of only one bid.

The new highway, running beneath Key Bridge, would eliminate the present traffic jam at Rosslyn Circle. From the bridge, the highway would carry traffic north to Spout Run, then under N. Uhle st. and then to the end of Lorcum Lane, and will connect with Lee hwy. near N. Kirkwood rd.

Yule Cards Delivered To Sender by Mailman

Huntington, W. Va., Dec. 19 (AP). A local matron put her Christmas cards in an empty carton and gave them to an errand boy to mail.

The boy left the entire package at the mail window and the clerk not noticing it was not sealed and taking a quick glance at its red-and-white label, threw it in with a bin of Christmas mail.

The next day, a postman knocked at the matron's door and collected $16.75 for C. O. D. package.

She had bought her Christmas cards back.

De Gasperi Gets New Vote Of Confidence

Rome, Dec. 19 (AP).—Premier Alcide de Gasperi, hard pressed by leftist criticism and demonstrations, was given a new vote of confidence in the Constituent Assembly tonight after nine persons had been reported hurt in Caltanissetta in Sicily's second outbreak of violence in two days.

The assembly approved an order of the day saying it had heard and approved government declarations of policy. The roll call of 435 deputies showed 303 for the order and 118 Communists and pro-Communist Socialists, opposed. Fourteen did not vote.

Supporting De Gasperi's government were his Christian Democrats and most deputies of the Republican and Labor Socialist Parties, admitted to the cabinet this week, and of the Liberal Party and Common Man Movement.

Criticism Precedes Vote

Before the vote, the Communists and their Socialist allies criticized the government at length, and De Gasperi gave an hour-long reply.

The interior ministry, reporting the trouble in Caltanissetta, said strikers blocked the city hall and resorted to gunfire and grenades when police charged them.

The ministry said leftists blocked off the city hal lto prevent a meet- to elect a new Christian Democrat ing of the city council which was mayor. When police sounded warning trumpets and charged, the leftists dispersed, but reformed. Police charged a second time, and were met with bullets and small bombs, the ministry said.

Rome newspapers reported that one corporal of carabinieri, two police agents and six demonstrators were injured.

Strikes Threatened

A general strike continued at Caltanissetta, another one was called at Messina, and others were threatened at Agrigento and Trampani, all in Sicily.

General strikes at Palermo, the Sicilian capital, and Catania, ended last night after three days. The windup of the walkout at Palermo last night was marked at a clash in front of the municipal building, where Ansa News Agency said 13 persons were injured.

Meanwhile, Italy faced her second national strike in the past two months—that of food plant workers and food handlers. Approximately 300,000 workers are involved.

Japan 'Surrender' Cabinet Hit in 2 Billion War Goods Deal

By Ralph Chapman

Tokyo, Dec. 19.—Charges that the "surrender" cabinet of Premier Kantaro Suzuki acted in bad faith by ordering on August 15, 1945, the secret disposal of government property worth 100 billion yen (two billion dollars) are contained in a report of a special diet committee on concealed goods to be submitted tomorrow to Komakichi Matsuoka, speaker of the House of Representatives.

The report also alleges interference by government and police officials with the committee's investigations. The materials involved were the property of the war and navy ministries at the war's end.

The special committee, headed by Kanjo Kato, left-wing Socialist leader, says, "it is even possible that the secret disposal of military goods may have included arms and munitions which may still be in concealment." Millions of yens worth of concealed materials, though no arms, already have been uncovered at the Osaka arsenal and other places.

The report says the Suzuki government "deliberately chose to understaid that only arms would be handed over to the allies and that all other war goods could be disposed of freely."

The "surrender" cabinet is said to have "decided to curry favor by distributing war goods and materials to government organs, public organizations, private factories and private persons."

Since then, it is charged, no cabinet has made any real effort to obtain the return of the illegally held war materials.

Britain Will Purchase Wheat In Australia Instead of U. S.

London, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Britain will not purchase any dollar wheat from the United States in the crop year ending next summer, Food Minister John Strachey told Commons today in announcing a new wheat contract with Australia.

At the same time, Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade offered to relax the 75 per cent tax on Hollywood-made films if American motion picture theaters show more British films.

Strachey said the Australian contract, which will run for one year, calls for the delivery of 80 million bushels of wheat at a price of 17 Australian shillings ($2.75) per bushel.

He pointed out that the wheat was not for the United Kingdom alone and that "nearly half has been purchased for delivery to colonies and other areas which . . . the United Kingdom is at present responsible." Only a small portion of it would be available for the United Kingdom itself this year, he said.

'Will Ease Anxieties'

"Nevertheless, if wheat can be delivered to our ships in Australian ports in regular and substantial quantities it will ease these serious anxieties for our bread supply whch we have each year experienced in late spring," Strachey said.

"But it cannot do more than this," he added. "It should enable us, however, to avoid making any request for wheat from the United States in this crop year. This has the advantage of saving dollars. Moreover, it enables us to take the whole British requirement off the hands of the United States Government which we realize is making intense efforts to feed western Europe and other areas which may be in great need the remainder of this crop year."

Meanwhile, the Board of Trade president proposed a relaxation of the 75 per cent tax on American-made motion pictures providing United States fil mcompanies discontinue their ban on shipments of new films here and that American motion picture theaters exhibit more British-made movies.

British Seek to Raise Output

American companies stopped shipment of films to England after the imposition of the 75 per cent cut in profits they were allowed to remove from England.

If the American companies fail to change their stand, Wilson said, "We should have to fall back on our own resources."

Wilson said he also would call upon American companies owning studios here to play their part in increasing British film production. He said certain apprehensions had been expressed concerning the alleged failure of the American studios to use their studios to full capacity production.

GWU Center Goes To Hospital With Old Grid Injury

Donald J. Druckenmiller, George Washington University football center, was in Emergency Hospital last night, suffering from a possible blood clot on the brain.

The sophomore grid star became ill while studying at a friend's room late Wednesday night, and was taken to Emergency, where his condition last night was described as "vastly improved."

Druckenmiller's physician, Dr. James Winston Watts, said that Druckenmiller had suffered a concussion in the October 24 game between GWU and the University of Miami.

The player felt able to continue play, but Coach Skip Stahley kept him out of action for the remainder of the season.

Druckenmiller lives at 2758 N. Washington blvd., Arlington, Va., and has been a member of the GWU varsity for two years.

12% Upsurge In Yule Sales Here Reported

By S. Oliver Goodman

A new Washington record for Christmas buying seemed assured yesterday as gift shopping gained momentum during the past two weeks.

For the week ended December 13 store sales here were 12 per cent improved over the same 1946 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. It was during this week that the Hecht Co.'s Washington store reported on all-time sales peak for a single day.

Barring a blizzard or other weather handicap, estimates put today's sales and the next three shopping days as likely to range from 10 to 20 per cent over last year.

Volume has been steadily mounting since the first of the month. This was welcome news to local merchants because in the first 11 months this year sales had shown signs of leveling. The gain had narrowed to 2 per cent over last year.

For the four weeks ended December 13, local store sales advanced 7 per cent over the same period last year.

Regionally, sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District were 11 per cent higher for the week and 6 per cent improved for the four-week period.

"It cannot provide . . . for the security of our country if, it is forced to build an organization with second or third rate men."

Members of the advisory commission, which met with Forrestal yesterday, are:

Charles R. Hook, Middletown Ohio, president of the American Rolling Mill Co., chairman.

Father John J. Cavanaugh South Bend., Ind., president of Notre Dame University.

Keith S. McHugh, New York City, vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Lawrence H. Whiting, Chicago, president of Whiting and Co. and the American Furniture Mart Building Co.

Review 40 Years Ago

Secretary Forrestal told the group that the last thorough review of service pay schedules was made 40 years ago. Since then, not only the cost of living but the "general composition" of the armed forces has radically changed, he said. Many more technicians of al ltypes are required.

Not only the adequacy of present pay, but the "soundness of the general pay structures themselves," must be reviewed, Forrestal said.

"There are disparities and inequalities in pay and other benefits which are not consistent with sound personnel policies," he added, "and which not only affect morale and efficiency, but also seriously limit the effectiveness of certain activities."

Increase in '42, '46

While the basic service pay act was written in 1908, there have been several revisions since. Increases were voted by Congress in 1942 and again in 1946, with the pay of a private upped from $21 a month in prewar days to $75 at present. Senior officers were given a 10 per cent boost in 1946.

Forrestal said the commission will consider a pay revision for the Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and medical and dental officers of the Public Health Service as well as the armed forces.

A special committee of officials of the defense establishment, appointed by Forrestal to study military pay questions "from a service viewpoint," met with the Hook Commission yesterday. Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan heads this group.

Other members are: Assistant Army Secretary Gordon Gray, Assistant Air Force Secretary Eugene M. Zuckert, Vice Admiral William M. Fechteller, deputy chief of naval operations for personnel; Brig. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, Army general staff, and Brig. Gen. Robert W. Burns, assistant deputy chief of air staff.

Atom Death Ray Shown In Bottle

By Howard W. Blakeslee

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 19 (AP).—A baby-size death ray, in a bottle 3 inches high and an inch in diameter, was shown today to scientists gathered at Alabama Polytechnic Institute for the first conference on use of radioactive atoms in agricultural research.

The ray came out of the top of the bottle when the stopper was removed. It was made of electrons, the smallest known bits of matter, each of nearly two million electron volts energy.

The beam shot out about 10 feet, in a cone shape, like a flashlight beam. It was detected and measured by a counting machine, which caused each passing electron to cause a click. The beam just above the bottle was a hiss.

This death ray would not kill a man, but if someone could point the open end of the bottle at a person for several days, at the same spot on the body, the result probably would be a cancer. The ray would kill germs and some small insects quickly.

The ray came from about two teaspoonfuls of liquid in the bottom of the bottle. The liquid contained radioactive phosphorus, made in the atomic oven, or pile, at Oak Ridge, Tenn. There was actually very little phosphorus in the liquid. The baby ray was part of a demonstration showing the extreme potency of the radioactive isotopes which are being made for agricultural research, to solve more of the puzzles of how plants grow and use fertilizer.

The baby death ray apparently also demonstrates that these radioactive materials cannot be used for making large death rays. A big piece of the phosphorus would not send its beam any farther than the tiny bottle, but the rays would contain many more electrons.

Gen. Meyers Is Indicted

would be required to appear Monday to furnish his bond.

The indictment of the 35-year-old Lamarre, husband of the brunette whom Meyers swore was his "girl friend," was regarded as largely a matter of technical necessity on the part of the Government.

In order to bring charges that Meyers had induced someone to commit perjury, it was necessary to charge the person he is said to have persuaded.

Lamarre, however, took the stand before the Senate War Investigating Committee and admitted that he had lied under oath to the Senate committee at the request of Meyers, and then said what he swore to was the real story of Aviation Electric Co.

No Immunity Promised

Under questioning from Meyers' attorney, Lamarre swore he had been promised no immunity for turning State's evidence, but at the time the Senate committee appeared to feel he had wiped out much of his earlier offense by his final testimony.

Theoretically conviction of Meyers on all six counts of the indictment could bring a maximum sentence of 60 years. Actually, however, in cases of this sort, sentences normally run concurrently. Minimum penalty for perjury under the District code, and for subornation of perjury, is a two-year jail term.

Sought At Mansion

Federal marshals were instructed to serve warrants on Meyers at his $80,000 mansion in Halesite, N. Y., and on Lamarre in Dayton, Ohio.

The District grand jury, consisting of 10 women and 13 men, returned its indictments before Judge Pine at 2:40 p. m.

Rogers Testifies

Action came after the jury heard a final witness, William P. Rogers, able chief counsel of the Senate War Investigating Committee, give brief testimony, largely of a technical nature, to show the committee was properly constituted and empowered to hear witnesses under oath.

Plumbers Seek To Ease Rules On Permits

A simplified procedure for obtaining permits for sewer and water connections in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties was asked yesterday by a group of nearby Maryland plumbers.

In a round-table meeting with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission at Hyattsville, 40 members of the Washington Suburban Master Plumbers' Association called for a program which would eliminate red tape entailed in present laws governing issuance of permits.

The commission, actually without authority to change the present laws, told the plumbers it would probe the legal possibility of simplifying the procedure and attempt to find a solution by next Tuesday.

The plumbers contended they are handicapped by laws requiring them to obtain permits from either town, county or State officials, depending on the locality of the property involved. The advocated a "central agency" for issuing permits in the two counties.

According to Dwight D. Galt, chairman of the sanitary commission, the plumbers' problem actually centers on only about 15 per cent of the new property in the nearby Maryland area. The remaining 85 per cent ,he said, is undeveloped subdivisions where plumbers now can optrate without permits because the streets have not yet been accepted by local or State authorities.

Members of the commission emphasized they were under no legal responsibility to act on the matter, but said they would attempt to find a solution because of their desire to cooperate with the plumbers.

Bandits in Midday Holdup Flee With $7398 Payroll

old desperado recently paroled from the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

The FBI entered the case after it was learned the bandits had crossed a State line in their stolen car.

The FBI also disclosed it has been seeking Fierst on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for the $3000 holdup of an Acme supermarket here last September.

Police said yesterday's holdup occurred at about 11:30 a. m. William Webster, 29, of 2520 3d st. ne., assistant comptroller of the Darby Printing Co., and a company driver, Allie Sidney, 38, of 717 Columbia rd. nw., drove up in front of their plant with the payroll for the firm's mechanical employes.

Webster had a canvas bag containing $7398 in currency and change, one $100 Government savings bond and five $25 savings bonds.

According to Otis H. Johnson, president of the Darby Co., Webster "became suspicious" when he saw a green Plymouth sedan parked at the curb with three men in it.

Webster waited several moments, then leaped from his car and dashed for the entrance to the building. Two of the bandits jumped out and raced up the few steps leading into the building.

Just inside the front entrance, one of the holdup men jabbed a pistol into Webster's back. "Keep going; don't turn back," he directed.

Then he advised Webster: "Hand over the bag and turn around and kneel on the steps and you won't get hurt." Whereupon his companion snatched the payroll bag from Webster, and both men fled back to their car.

The third bandit had remained behind the wheel of the car during the few seconds required to accomplish the holdup.

Sidney had remained in his car. Police said after he had watched the two holdup men, each carrying a .45-caliber automatic, tumble into their car and drive off, Sidney attempted to follow them.

He gave up his pursuit after six blocks and returned to the printing plant.

Within a few minutes, the police radio was carrying a report of the holdup.

Roadblocks Set Up

Captain Bryant said that as soon as police had verified the fact that there had been a holdup, a radio call went to all police, putting them at emergency posts. Every exit from the city, including bridges and roads, was blocked.

But the bandits either had got through or managed to slip past police unobserved.

Pvt. Ralph Harper, Metropolitan Police radio dispatcher, sent out a description of the getaway car and listed four license tags that might be on it. Descriptions of the three holdup men also were flashed.

Meanwhile, Webster and Sidney had been taken to police headquarters to view rogue's gallery pictures. Capt. Bryant said Webster picked out a photograph of Mack Wilson Fierst as one of the bandits.

Description of Fierst

Fierst, whase aliases are Joseph Smith and "Little Maxie," was described as 5 feet, 7½ inches in height, about 150 pounds, with blue-gray eyes, medium complexion and medium brown hair.

The police description said he was wearing a dark felt hat, a tan windbreaker and dark trousers.

The second man was described as about 38 years old, 5 feet 9, of slender build and wearing a gray double-breasted suit and gray felt hat.

The only description of the third man, the driver, was that he was wearing a white wrap-around coat, similar to those worn by butchers.

The getaway car found abandoned in Mount Rainier was a green Plymouth sedan bearing the Virginia license tag 18-989.

Captain Bryant said there was an "apparent similarity" between the Darby Printing Co. holdup and one pulled off Wednesday by two armed men in Silver Spring.

In the Wednesday holdup, the bandit pair accosted two employes of the Haynes Lithograph Co., as they returned to their office at 1140 East-West hgwy., Silver Spring, with a $7576 payroll. In that holdup one of the men carried a .45-caliber automatic.

Lieut. Robert V. Murray, head of the robbery squad, said police have a warrant for Fierst's arrest in connection with the holdup of the Acme supermarket, 1531 F st. ne., on September 27.

Gunman Driven Away

That holdup was staged late on a Saturday afternoon by a lone gunman who entered the office of Francis W. Feagans, store manager, and robbed him of $3000. Police, at that time, said they believed the gunman was driven off in a car which witnesses said was a Plymouth, variously described as tan, gray or green.

Lieutenant Murray said Fierst was paroled from Atlanta last July. He had been serving a 6 to 12-year term. He was sent to Atlanta in December, 1939, after pleading guilty to three robberies here, among them the $9500 payroll robbery of the Charles H. Tompkins Construction Co., 907 16th st. nw., in September, 1939. He also pleaded guilty to the $1600 holdup of two numbers men, and a restaurant robbery in which he took $227.

The payroll seized in yesterday's holdup had been collected a short time earlier at the Second National Bank, 509 7th st. nw.

Johnson, company president, said he was distributing $3000 in bonus payments to his employes at the time of the holdup. Johnson said about 100 workers out of 175 were in the building at the time.

Naming Names

The resolution, adopted Thursday by the Senate and yesterday by the House, to make public the names of commodity exchange speculators is no doubt the preferable horn of a difficult dilemma. As we have indicated in previous comments, we do not at all share President Truman's view that speculation is, of itself, necessarily nefarious. To disclose the names of private citizens who speculated in grain, with an implication that they have been guilty of some sordid crime when in point of fact their activity has been altogether legal, is to effect a serious injustice. On the other hand, the Pauley case has given rise to widespread suspicion that other Government officials have been making fortunes on the commodity exchanges; the public is entitled to know if members of either the executive or the legislative branch of the Government have been gambling while in public office. To make Mr. Pauley a scapegoat would be to work at once an injustice and an impairment of public confidence.

Clearly, moreover, the decision to make the names public is vastly preferable to the course which the Senate Appropriations Committee attempted to pursue Thursday when it haled the Secretary of Agriculture before it, demanding that he disclose his list of speculators to the committee in confidence. The Secretary must be credited with a most skillful exposure of the political motivation behind this demand. "I shall not permit myself," he said, "to be charged with shielding anyone by a refusal to grant your request. If your decision to demand the names remains unchanged, you and the public (italics supplied) will have them as rapidly as we can gather the information and prepare the lists."

But, of course, this was not at all what the Republican leaders in the Senate wanted. They wanted a secret look at the list so that they could determine whether publication would provide political capital for them. Confronted with the Anderson ultimatum, the committee backed down. In the face of this fiasco and of the President's recommendation of full public disclosure, Congress had no alternative but to take the action it took. The effect should be complete exposure of all public officials who have betrayed their trust or profited from their access to inside information, regardless of their political affiliation.

It is especially gratifying that there will be no congressional immunity from this exposure. It should be made clear, however, that no stigma attaches to private speculators whose names will be divulged at the same time. If Congress wants to prevent commodity speculation, it is at liberty to do so by appropriate legislation. In any event, it has already adopted, very properly in our opinion, the second point of the President's inflation control program, restriction of trading on the commodity exchanges.

The Ineffable Petrillo

You will recall that a short time ago Mr. J. Caesar Petrillo announced that at the end of this year the members of his American Federation of Musicians would cease to make any more records. The reasoning was that the phonographs and juke boxes were putting Mr. Petrillo's boys out of work. As long as the recording companies were paying royalties to the American Federation of Musicians on every record made, Mr. Petrillo tolerated the competition of canned music. However, such royalties have been made illegal under the terms of the Taft-Hartley Act.

But now Mr. Petrillo by an ingenious stroke of logic, has decided that the Taft-Hartley Act is not retroactive, and does not in any way impair the validity of contracts made before the passage of the act. Therefore, the recording companies, although they will get no new records from the boys, must go on paying the royalties on all records impressed from the master records made when the contracts were in force. This would mean the continuation of an unearned revenue of approximately two million dollars a year.

It is not clear precisely what steps Mr. Petrillo intends to take to enforce the payment. One possibility, of course, is that he will forbid performances by any members of his union on any program to be broadcast over any network which includes any station which plays records on which the royalties are in default. But, although until now the radio and recording companies have shown themselves somewhat invertebrate in their contests with Mr. Petrillo, it seems unlikely that they would yield to this sort of intimidation without a struggle.

The probability is that they will take the matter into court. But even though the courts might decree the payment of the royalties to be illegal, this would have little effect on the concrete situation. Their only course is in being as intransigeant as Mr. Petrillo himself; in other words, to play whatever recordings are available and to let Mr. Petrillo and his boys make the most of it.

Plan Of Action

Congress now has in its hands the President's draft of the European Recovery Program. The stages in its progress to Congress started last June 5 when Secretary Marshall announced the American offer (conditional, of course, on congressional acceptance) to help Europe on a self-help program of European recovery. Europe, or rather 18 nations of Europe, responded to the offer by putting on paper its capabilities and its requirements. The result was then screened at the American end and judged in the context of American resources. In this work the President mobilized regular agencies of Government and a distinguished group of American citizens under the chairmanship of Secretary Harriman. Mr. Truman's recommendations are the fruit of all these labors; by these groups they are deemed a proper, wise and necessary use of American resources. This we ourselves firmly believe.

The studies and reports that have been made on what will always be called the Marshall Plan look like the dream-world of an accountant. Actually the program is a "grand design" as essential to American security as it is to the return of European health. Unfortunately the President does not labor this argument. He maintains the cool and detached approach which has marked both European and American draftsmen. It is as if Mr. Truman were saying to Congress: "This is how all my advisers, together with the most expert minds we could mobilize outside official life, see this problem. Now it is up to you." It is a pity that this has been the strategy. After the June 5 speech, we expressed the hope that the initiative would spark a new unity in Europe, and that the work of the 16-nation committee in Paris would begin with a declaration of interdependence. This was Secretary Marshall's concept. But the European experts did not put it in words, though it underlies their blueprint. It also runs through the prosaically worded plan and the message accompanying it that the President has just put in the hands of Congress.

What would be the cost of this historic undertaking? The President asks for an authorization of 17 billion dollars for spending over 4¼ years. The appropriation, as distinct from the authorization, would be on a yearly basis. This is about 5 per cent of the cost of our war bill, and the yearly cost would be less than 3 per cent of our national income. What would be exported under this program would be no more than what is now being currently exported. Even so, the program means some self-denial for Americans, though the living standard that we should enjoy would still be well above our prewar standard. Is the plan worth this price? The answer to that must be considered in terms of the alternative. When Secretary Marshall made his offer, the Old Continent was in danger of lapsing into a congeries of slums. It takes no seer to figure out what this deterioration would signify in civil outbreaks, outside aggression, and the loss to the free world of a base in Europe of our civilization. Mr. Marshall, moreover, wanted to wind up "Operation Rathole," that is to say, handouts and loans for relief of distress, and in its place to essay "a cure in place of a palliative." It is this alternative that would be faced by failure to carry the Marshall Plan into effect. There has been no change except for the worse in the outlook for Europe without a Marshall Plan.

He would be foolish who thought that this country would be the same country in the presence of this alternative in Europe. "Events are in the saddle, riding mankind." Already a case of the jitters has seized many Americans as a result of the spectacle of the unmasked ambitions of the Soviet Union. What would the state of mind be if Soviet power extinguished the independence of the countries facing this Nation across the Atlantic? Certainly there would be an irresistible clamor for a militarized state and the sacrifice of those civil liberties which are already endangered. And that would cost money, plenty of it. The Marshall Plan, in other words, may be regarded as Operation Survival for our free world. It is an investment in our security and our liberties which should persuade Congress to err on the side of generosity rather than economy in seconding the plan that is at last before the Nation in black and white. The plan gives a purposive direction to our foreign policy to make the world safe for us to live in.

Radford's Position

Whatever the source of the opposition to the appointment of Vice Admiral Arthur W. Radford as Deputy Chief of Naval Operations, the country is the principal loser in the personal vendetta that seems to have developed. Admiral Radford has proved himself a brilliant officer who, through his background planning in pilot training and procurement, was instrumental in the success of naval aviation during the war. Reportedly Admiral Radford is the first choice of his Navy superiors for the No. 2 naval job, which by tradition goes to an aviator. It thus can be inferred that his appointment is being blocked by outside pressure—or, rather, interference. This pressure has been ascribed to various sources, including the Air Force and even the White House.

It is easy to explain the opposition, if not to understand it. Admiral Radford was an outspoken critic of the armed forces unification bill, principally because of his concern over the status of naval aviation. Denial of preferment on this ground would be a narrow and self-defeating move which would serve neither the interests of unification nor those of the national defense. Many sincere persons opposed unification for one reason or another. Admiral Radford's courage in speaking his mind before the passage of the bill can in no way be construed as indicating that he does not now accept the fact of the bill as passed. Moreover, unification was never intended to unify away all differences of opinion or to apply a strait jacket to military thinking; its purpose was to eliminate duplications and simplify operating procedure.

One of the essential points that remains to be spelled out under unification is the mission of naval aviation. Naval planes proved far too valuable as a strategic weapon during the war for their use now to be confined to mere support of surface operations. Expert minds are needed to work out the specific job of naval aviation and to correlate it with the functions of the Air Force. By the same token no one is better qualified to speak for the Navy than Admiral Radford. At the very least the decision on whether to appoint him should be considered the Navy's own business.

Better Than Nothing

The Republican-sponsored measure to curb inflation, rushed through the Senate and House in the last two days of the special session, is better than nothing, but little better. For it provides for a one-year extension of export and transportation controls due to expire at the end of February. Aroused by the obduracy of the distilling industry in rejecting Administration proposals for voluntary restriction of grain consumption, Congress has also empowered the President to limit the amount of grain used for distilling purposes until February 1.

With that exception purely voluntary agreements among representatives of industry, business and agriculture are relied upon to control commodity speculation and to channel scarce supplies to industrial users. Such agreements are subject to approval by the President and may not, in any case, provide for the fixing of prices. Owing to sharp criticism of the original sweeping provisions of the Taft bill exempting parties to allocation agreements from the operation of the antitrust laws, the Senator himself agreed to substitute a provision taken from the Administration bill introduced by Secretary Harriman providing for a review of all voluntary agreements by the Department of Justice and narrowing its scope. This action makes the measure much more acceptable to the Administration, and allays fears that oppressive monopolistic practices might be fostered by relaxing the antitrust laws.

We attribute the passage of the Taft bill by such large majorities to a widespread conviction that half a loaf is better than no bread at all. That was evidently the view of Senator Barkley, who voted for the measure because he thought the good in it outweighed the bad. But if the Republicans want an effective anti-inflation program, we believe they will have to turn to selective forms of compulsory allocation and price control. However, the Republican leadership refuses to consider these alternatives until the efficacy of voluntary controls have been tested. That being the case, enactment of the inadequate anti-inflation program before adjournment at least has the advantage of advancing the date for putting Republican theories to the test of practice.

Academic Freedom

Nowhere is the panic atmosphere of our time more pitifully disclosed than in the timorousness—the allergy to ideas—of some of our great institutions of learning. The College of the City of New York, for example, lately refused to let its students listen to Arnold Johnson, Communist Party legislative director—on the ground that the Attorney General, in a list of organizations prepared for the guidance of the Loyalty Review Board, has declared the Communist Party to be communistic; apparently CCNY had never thought of it in quite this light before. At the same time, Columbia University, which is permitting Mr. Johnson to speak on its campus, has barred a speech by Howard Fast, now under conviction of contempt of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, on the ground of a "university precedent that no person under indictment" may use university facilities. The University of Wisconsin, to cite another recent instance, has barred Carl Marzani "because of the moral implications involved in sponsoring a man of Marzani's record," although he had been allowed to speak at both Columbia and CCNY last summer.

It should be understood that in no case would the universities involved be sponsoring the proscribed speakers. They would merely be permitting duly authorized student groups to do the sponsoring. Granted that the ideas of these speakers are odious, and indeed pernicious, is suppression of them a prudent tactic to pursue in dealing with inquiring young minds? "We should be eternally vigilant," Mr. Justice Holmes once said, "against attempts to check the expression of opinions that we loathe and believe to be fraught with death, unless they so imminently threaten interference with the lawful and pressing purpose of the law that an immediate check is necessary to save the country."

What are the universities afraid of? Is it possible that the authorities of Columbia consider Howard Fast so formidable and his ideas so attractive that they do not dare allow them expression? Have they so little faith in democratic doctrines as to suppose these will be overwhelmed in the first test of merit when compared with Communist doctrines? Can these misguided Soviet salesmen or the curious students who want to hear them really be called imminent threats to the security of the state? If not, let them—to quote again the excellent counsel of Thomas Jefferson—"stand undisturbed as monuments of the safety with which error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is free to combat it." In our universities, if nowhere else, reason ought to be kept free.

Security Cases

The contribution of The Washington Post and its radio station WINX to the defense of civil liberties in the recent State Department security cases is in the finest American tradition. As some of the principals who have won personal vindication, may we express our thanks and appreciation both to you and to Mr. Ed Hart? Mr. Hart's program on WINX and radio stations in other cities brought our case before a large audience throughout the country and contributed greatly toward the State Department's reconsideration of its ill-considered and hasty action.

In expressing our personal gratitude, may we also thank you on behalf of the thousands of Government employes who will benefit from the promised adoption of fairer procedures not only in the State Department but in all Federal agencies? This achievement is a tribute to the power of the free American press as a bulwark of individual liberties.

"Jews And Arabs"

In your December 12 editorial, "Jews and Arabs," you mention that in the Arab world during the last 30 years "in turn, and sometimes simultaneously, the sword has been raised against the British, the Jews and Arabia's own rulers." You might have added the French, for the sake of completeness and greater effect.

What you omit, however, is the reason for the "coups and riots in the Arab world since it was liberated from the Turkish yoke." You do not mention, for instance, the fact that the Arabs played a great part in the defeat of Turkey, losing over 400,000 lives in the process. Nor, that far from being liberated the Arabs were put under British and French rule, with a further Zionist aggression in Palestine. From which it follows that the "disturbances" were not "generated by antiforeignism," as you claim, but by the very natural desire of a people to throw off the shackles of foreign imperialistic rule. But for the revolt of 1919, in Egypt, of 1920 in Iraq, of 1925 in Syria, these countries would not have achieved even their present degree of independence. But for the Arab revolts of 1920, 1929 and 1936, Palestine would today be a Jewish national state.

Revolts are no more "endemic in," or congenial to, the Arab countries than any other countries. They are one of the many misfortunes brought upon them by western imperialism and Zionism.

As for the latest U. N. decision, your point out that economic cooperation between Arabs and Jews would be beneficial—you might even have added that without it the Jewish community in Palestine cannot ever hope to be solvent. How this is to take place after partition you do not, however, explain, nor indeed have those who forced partition through the U. N. Your formula of "political partition and economic union" sounds very much like "a divorce followed by a happy married life ever after."

Speculator Pauley

How many citizens' indignation reached the nth degree with your story this morning of Edwin W. Pauley's speculations in the grain market? Basically the fault lies with Congress for allowing gambling on the grain market and in the Nation's supply of commodities, for allowing such individuals or groups to profit at the expense of others. When prices broke in the cotton market, the Cotton Exchange was closed. Why not stop the gambling with the Nation's food supply and Europe's hunger.

How many of us would like to hedge against inflation, to guarantee our children higher education, to cushion the depression that the Russian government is banking on. All of us would, but not at the expense of this Nation's future. It is incidents like this that are fuel for Russia's propaganda machine.

Federal Salaries

There is some talk about a cost-of-living increase to Federal employes. The writer takes no issue with any urgent needs to adjust the income of workers.

In considering a realistic approach, it is desirable to assume that the basic cost of living has gone up for all workers alike. When the price of a quart of milk goes up 2 cents, each individual bears the identical increase—and not on a percentage basis. Therefore any increase should be extended to all workers irrespective of their pay.

However it must be done with fairness. The last pay raise of Federal employes was 14 per cent across the board. Thus the $2000 worker received a pay increase of $280 and the $7000 worker received $980. To the first it meant bread on his table; to the second it simply meant he would pay a bit more taxes and save more.

Before considering a pay raise, let this inequity first be wiped out be canceling that 14 per cent raise. Then give each employe a flat increase in line with the total general increases prevalent in industry. The lower-paid workers would benefit considerably by this procedure, and the pay differential between the various grades would still be maintained. A. E. T.

'Diplomatic Boondoggling'

The December 15 letter by William C. Bullitt is an unexampled piece of extremely poor sportsmanship.

Mr. Bullitt appears to be patently miffed at Mr. Walter Lippmann for the latter's comments on the China policy Bullitt recently espoused in Life magazine. This may be understandable, but his ineffectual retort may not be so easily comprehended by an American public which is vitally interested in its Government's policies in the Far East.

None of the excerpts Mr. Bullitt has adduced from Walter Lippmann's book, U. S. Foreign Policy—Shield of the Republic, serves to undermine in any way Mr. Lippman's present stand on American foreign policy in China. Mr. Lippmann, it would at least appear from his recent articles in The Washington Post, has not opposed the policy of containment of Russia in China, but rather some of the proposed methods of implementing this policy, among which he has included those urged by Mr. Bullitt.

Mr. Lippmann's comments on his own past shortcomings merely reflect his humble acknowledgment that human opinion may be subject to fallibility. One is tempted to infer from Mr. Bullitt's supercilliousness on this matter that he has never been afflicted with similar manifestations. This, I submit, might be open to debate.

Mr. Bullitt offered neither rational rebuttal nor convincing counterargument to Mr. Lippmann's expressed views. He purported to expose inconsistencies which, in actual fact, are not inconsistencies at all. To my knowledge Mr. Lippmann has never represented himself to be an oracle of political opinion, and if he is the "matrons' mentor," as Mr. Bullitt so peevishly suggests, then I say the "matrons" could do worse!

Racial Problems Broadcast

The December 14 broadcast over WTOP on the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights was a remarkable revelation. The broadcast was notable for the fact that of all the private and public citizens involved, no one in an official capacity could be found to defend the principle of segregation which is practiced in the District. Only two officials dared to express their private opinions in the matter, and even they limited themselves to the enforcement of the directives which they received from the District government. This state of affairs reveals conclusively how shaky is the ethical foundation upon which present segregation policies in Washington rest.

Onto this thin ice, however, Mr. Clifford Newell, in his role as former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, had no hesitation in rushing. In his broadcast speech and in the statement which he handed out to the press a few days ago, he has claimed to refute all of the statements of the President's Committee as they refer to the District.

Mr. Newell claims that only the trouble-making type of Negro wishes to move into a white neighborhood (which, incidentally, may be just across the street or in the next block). He implies that any Negro who buys a house in such an area is responsible for lowering the living conditions there and creating disturbances which will inevitably force the neighbors to move out.

The areas in which the question of covenants is most acute—in the North Capitol and Brookland districts—have actually benefited from the influx of Negroes who have bought houses there. I have personally visited houses in both neighborhoods and have seen the improvements made by their new owners at great expense. Some of these houses are now owned by professors at Howard University, whose incomes far exceed those of the previous occupants and whose presence in other less biased communities would be considered an asset to the neighborhood.

JAMES H. WHYTE.
Washington.

On December 15 you published an article under the headline, "Radio Venture Into Controversial Matters Finds Speakers Shy on Racial Problems," in which I was mentioned as one who "refused to join in the program."

I refused a telephoned invitation on the score that I am now behind in work to which I am committed and that such a discussion would necessarily be only a beginning—it would, at the least, be followed by letters and telephone calls which must be answered. Moreover, if it is to be of constructive value, a program on such a subject must be carefully prepared and must be followed up. That means time and effort. Simply to have a miscellany of people speak extemporaneously would, in my belief, make for further misunderstanding.

If some responsible agency will arrange a series of broadcasts based upon a clear statement of purpose—such as "an attempt to find the area of agreement in racial problems," and will develop a program designed to promote mutual understanding, I shall be glad to participate after the first of the year, when I hope to have cleared away some of my present workload. Executive Officer, National Capital Housing Authority.

Hardheaded Spending

By Malvina Lindsay

Cautious Santa Claus

PRE-CHRISTMAS shopping, always a psychological barometer of the Nation, is showing a more down-to-earth mood than at any time since before the war. It should give armchair statesmen a chance to observe, "the American people are at last coming to their senses."

On the surface it is hectic, as usual. There is the same old melee in the stores—as might be expected with 59 million Americans employed. "Where is the money coming from?" is the widespread question.

But though department sales are running ahead of last year in volume—largely because of higher prices—unit sales are generally down. This is partly because of necessity. Inflated living costs are eating up Christmas dollars. But there is also a more practical and sober attitude among those who even last Christmas were buying $20-an-ounce perfume, negligees designed for posturing on chaise longues, and cases—or at least bottles—of champagne.

It is in the method of spending that caution shows up—in resistance to the 20 per cent tax on cosmetics, handbags, other so-called luxuries; in buying one-fourth ounce bottles of perfume and the other smaller packages that manufacturers who know how to trim their sails to the wind are offering; in passing up high-priced jewelry; in the search for the old standby, the $1 gift; in the demand for moderate-priced merchandise, as scarfs, hose, chinaware, and in practical purchases, such as household appliances.

THE GRAB for glamour is definitely over. Hand-painted neckties, jewel-studded cigarette lighters, mink slacks and dog blankets are not making conversation this Christmas. One New York department store has stopped selling diamonds, emeralds and rubies. While customers are thick around hose counters, "nylonitis" is not so prevalent. There is the usual Christmas demand for sheer hose for gifts, yet hose manufacturers report a growing tendency among women to buy the "business girl's sheer" that wears longer than the cobweb varieties that were once fought for.

All buyers are canny; they look for quality and are slow in their decisions. The easy money is lacking, also the "Ill-take-anything" spirit. Merchants describe the situation as a return to prewar shopping.

This tendency of Christmas shoppers to draw in their horns is significant at a time when so many people are working and so much money is in circulation. For though the war's excitement is wall over, yet the boom spirit might be expected to prevail. At other boom times there has been an attitude of high confidence and expectation among shoppers. But now both they and the merchants are a little anxious.

YET THE CHIEF time when Americans habitually surrender caution is Christmas. The feeling that Santa Claus must bring a full pack, even though the family spend the rest of the year paying the loan company for his visit, is widespread. And many families this year are having Christmas as usual by this method, also by installment buying. Many others aren't having much Christmas at all because the butcher is taking the money.

Middle and upper income groups are generally buying more cautiously than for many a year. If they show enough restraint, it is possible that with the increased amount of quality goods on store shelves prices may begin to weaken on some fronts. Unit sales in department stores were lagging through November. Unless late holiday shopping gives them a big boost, there is a chance of some after-Christmas bargain sales, though nothing like the price crashes before the war can be expected.

Spring prices are heading upward in a big way. How high they go depends partly on consumers. Neither Congress nor the President, nor both together, can hold them down unless consumers cooperate. There are many necessities such as food that people must have—at any cost. But there are many things they can do without as a contribution to halting inflation. The fact that they are over their splurging fever holds a little hope they will help put some check on inflation before it is too late.

Rent Increases

I would like to suggest a sliding scale of rent increases. This sliding scale would not work any hardship on low income tenants but would compensate the landlord for the constantly rising costs of maintenance. The higher priced apartments should pay a larger increase due to the fact that they require proportionately a larger amount of help. Help is one of the main factors in increasing the cost of operation.

| Rent monthly | P. c. of all tenants | Increase in p. c. |
|---|---|---|
| Up to $19 | 45.2 | 6 |
| $20—$29 | 23.8 | 7½ |
| $30—$39 | 13.3 | 10 |
| $40—$49 | 6.6 | 12½ |
| $50—$74 | 5.5 | 15 |
| $75—$99 | 3 | 17½ |
| $100—$150 | .9 | 20 |

(Source: U. S. Census 1940.)

According to my suggestion 45.2 per cent of tenants would have to pay weekly increases of only 12c to 22c. The next group, amounting to 23 per cent of the tenants, would have their rent increased from 35c to 50c weekly. Only about 16 per cent of the tenants in higher-priced apartments would pay an increase in excess of 10 per cent.

'Gas Rationing'

A Communication

ONE WHO is familiar with your editorials would think twice before questioning one of them. But I have thought twice, and so I make certain observations with reference to the editorial entitled "Gas Rationing" that appeared in your issue of December 6.

You say that "there is as yet no shortage of the basic commodity" (crude petroleum). On the contrary, there has been a shortage that the writer had been predicting for many months without being able to get much attention from either the press or from our Federal officials. This shortage has been such that, as of last January, for the first time in history, we became a net importing country as to petroleum and its products rather than exporting one.

You adopt the easy philosophy that while there is "no shortage of the basic commodity, there are, however, insufficient refining facilities, pipe-lines, ships and tank cars . . . You explain that there is not enough steel to expand these facilities rapidly.

I INSIST that if there were no shortage of steel, so that we could have all of the refining facilities, pipe lines, ships, tank cars, etc., that we might need, there would still be a domestic shortage of gasoline and fuel oil, because there is today a shortage of crude oil. The first essential for the American people is to recognize this shortage. You explain nothing when you say that "the shortage, of course, is simply the tremendous increase in demand * * *." I should think that it might be taken for granted that the shortage results from the relationship of the demand to the supply. While this explanation explains nothing, it has the disadvantage of being regarded as a reassurance that is not justified by the present situation. There is little hope that demand will fall off. On the contrary, it is likely to become greater. The only way to meet that demand, therefore, is to increase the supply.

You seem to hold out hope that there would be enough oil to meet even the present demand if we only had more steel and, therefore more facilities, the providing of which requires steel. So far as I know, the only excess capacity of crude oil that is not being produced is a small amount in the west part of Texas.

But what the people ought to realize is that if every barrel of oil that could be produced in that area were being pumped, it would amount to only from 50,000 to 100,000 barrels a day. This distinctly would not take up the slack. There would still be a shortage of oil. Of course, I take the precaution, as I generally do, to caution that what I am talking about are proven oil fields. I am taking no account of oil that has not been discovered, and which may or may not be discovered within the continental area of the United States. Dream oil will not heat a house or run an automobile.

OF COURSE, we could import more oil. As a matter of fact, we should do so. We would have begun to do this long ago if the oil industry had not shut its eyes to the facts, with the help of public men and the public press. An important factor in the oil situation is the little matter of the tariff that the busy oil lobbyists have succeeded in imposing upon foreign oil. Of course, this means higher prices and bigger profits.

My own idea is that we ought to be importing oil not only to make up for our present deficiencies, but in order to provide some sort of a surplus against a future need which might become imperative at almost any time. In other words, the consumers, in paying a tariff, are in the position of assessing against themselves a money penalty. As a step in the right direction, the President might immediately reduce this tariff on foreign oil to the fullest extent possible.

As to "voluntary" rationing, which you seem to advocate, at least by inference, we tried that once in the early stages of the war. There are a few citizens of the United States who will voluntarily forgo the purchase of a commodity that they need or want, but there are very few. I was one of the principal, if not the principal, exhorter for voluntary rationing during the war. It did not work then, and it would not work now.

Tell the people that a commodity so essential as gasoline is going to be rationed, and they will hurry to burn up all of it that they can while they can get it. They will hoard it. They will compete in the black market for it. But in total, there would not be any more gasoline. On the contrary, my guess is that there would be less. "Timely self-discipline" is pure hooey. That is always for the other fellow. The true adage in the case of "voluntary" rationing would be that good old American one, "The early bird gets the worm."

THE EDITORIAL talks about "our search for substitute fuels." I think that I know something about that, too, and I am glad to be able to say that very great progress has been made in that direction. I can be proud of it because it was on my initiative that the Government undertook to find out what could be done in the way of producing gasoline and other petroleum derivatives from coal and shale. We know a lot about it now, but we also know that at least small-scale production of synthetics is costlier than the refinements of natural oil.

Our satisfaction in knowing that oil can be produced not only from coal and shale, but from natural gas, is tempered by the reflection that one John Taber casts his dark shadow over the Treasury. It costs a lot of money to build the refineries that could turn out synthetic gasoline in quantity. In passing, it might be said that, actually, the refinery capacity of the United States is not today completely utilized. There are many refineries that could run more crude oil if they could get it.

And then there is the question of the "most efficient use . . . of our oil." In this regard you probably know that using oil for space heating purposes is, by far, a less efficient use of petroleum. The people ought to be educated to continue to burn coal for space heating, and for manufacturing purposes, when coal is available. Instead of this, the very oil companies that now say that there is a scarcity of gasoline, encourage the use of heating oil. And certainly neither our public men nor our press discourage an inferior use. The oil companies and the oil burner concerns are prodigious advertisers. If, encouraged by editors of such a newspaper as yours, to use the same amount of space to explain why oil should not be less efficiently used as fuel when it could be more efficiently used as gasoline, we would be a long way on the road to self-sufficiency as to gasoline and other essential derivatives of crude oil.

MY LAST observation recurs again to the question of rationing, which you seem to think is only a matter of "timely self-discipline" which "go-getting" Americans would willingly and cheerfully impose upon themselves. I recall that when we had to decree rationing by law, because voluntary rationing was a total failure, we begged the people to keep the speed of their cards down to 35 miles an hour, which was the highest rate at which gasoline could be efficiently used. The people would not even do this, in the overwhelming majority of cases, although it was to their own self-interest to do so since this speed limit meant a more economical use of gasoline, as well as of the rubber in their tires.

What the country needs is public leadership in this matter of oil. Neither the iron curtain of the oil industry, nor the rosy tinting of the newspapers, will give the people the enlightenment that they need, not only for their own comfort, but for their safety.

Feng Charged With Aiding Chinese Reds

By the United Press

Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) asserted yesterday that Chinese Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang, now on a speaking tour in this country, is violating the hospitality of the United States by making "violent and untruthful attacks" upon the Chinese Nationalist government.

Judd, a former medical missionary to China, described Feng as a "professional renegade" who is collaborating with the Chinese Communists in the hope of regaining the power he once held as a Chinese warlord. Judd said that Feng "is being paraded by leftists in this country as a hero."

"In the turbulent history of China, no man has committed a greater number of betrayals," he told the House. "His life is a series of changes of loyalty from one commander to another."

Charges Red Affiliation

"When it was to his personal advantage, Feng allied himself with the most corrupt warlords of China who plunged that unhappy land into interminable civil strife. Today he is allied with the Communist rebels that are trying to turn the Republic of China into a Soviet dependency."

He said Feng attended the Moscow revolutionary schoool when he was forced to flee China in 1926. He returned, and in 1927, was exposed as a participant in a "Soviet plot to communize China," Judd said.

He said Feng at one time accepted the friendship of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, but broke with him and aligned himself with a Japanese "quisling."

Dual Role Claimed

He rejoined the Central government in a minor military role after outbreak of war with Japan, Judd said, but since then has been active in "the clique of dissidents who attempted to gain control of China by undermining Chiang Kai-shek while protesting loudly that Chiang is the only leader who can save China."

Judd compared Feng's case to that of former vice president Henry A. Wallace. When Wallace went abroad to attack United States foreign policies, he said, he was "repudiated" by the American public and press. But, he added, when Feng makes similar attacks against the Chinese government, "his statements are accepted as fact."

Judd said Feng is speaking under the auspices of the committee for a democratic Far Eastern policy which, he said, has been "cited as a notorious Communist front organization."

Russia Arrests Nine

Moscow, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—The government today announced the arrest of nine persons for running a black market in galoshes and shoes since the end of rationing.

Three Indicted In Soliciting Election Funds

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 19 (U.P.).—A Federal grand jury handed up indictments today, accusing Internal Revenue Collector Frank W. Kraemer and two subordinates of soliciting funds for the Democratic 1946 campaign from Federal employes.

Kraemer, who has headed the Connecticut Government office since 1936, was charged with 20 counts, involving collections totaling $2235.

Ralph A. Piccolo, head of the Bridgeport division and a one-time influential Fairfield County Democratic leader, was indicted on 14 counts involving $260, while Thomas J. O'Neil, deputy in charge of the Hartford office, was charged on 10 counts involving $75.

Carries Heavy Penalty

Conviction carries a penalty of three years imprisonment, a fine of $500, or both, and automatic dismissal from Government service.

Kraemer, who professed surprise that he was summoned among the nearly 600 witnesses examined by the grand jury during the past five weeks, had "no comment" on the indictment.

Of the $2235 which he was alleged to have collected, $1800 came from his division chief, Henry H. Webb, according to the information.

Webb was reported to have made a statement to special Treasury Agent Austin J. Curtin that Kraemer "had a definite interest in the contributions for the 1946 election and wanted the money collected through the office so he would see that it got into the right hands."

Action Followed Complaints

The grand jury was convened after two deputy collectors in the Bridgeport office—James Stapleton and Arnold Hyatt—complained to the Civil Service Commission that they were asked by Piccolo to contribute and that their names were entered on a list prepared by Piccolo showing who did, and did not, donate.

None of the three accused was in court when the indictments were handed up by the 22-member jury, and no date was set by Judge Carroll C. Hincks for their arraignment. The jury was discharged, indicating that further indictments were not contemplated.

50 New Nazi Leaders Arrested in Austria

Vienna, Austria, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—The Ministry of Interior announced today that 50 leaders of a ring which planned to finance a new Nazi movement on black market money had been placed under arrest.

A public safety department spokesman said that the black market phase of the operation "never got beyond the talking stage" and that additional arrests were expected.

Royall Orders Full Probe Of New Black Market Charges

By Bert Andrews

New and grave charges of "black marketing, customs violations and similar misconduct of American personnel in Germany" have reached Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, it was learned last night, and the result is that he has ordered a thorough investigation.

If the charges are substantiated—and the Department of the Army has already received highly detailed information — the inquiry will produce a scandal as unsavory as those which involved Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers and his wartime business deals, and Col. Jack W. Durant and the German jewels he "collected."

Clay to Investigate

These facts stood out last night:

1. That Secretary Royall, moving swiftly to get at the truth as soon as he heard the reports, advised Gen. Lucius D. Clay of the charges some days ago and General Clay promised to investigate them fully.

2. That Judge E. Earl Rives of the Greensboro (N. C.) County Court, already in the German theater as a special representative of the Secretary, has been asked by the Secretary to remain and delve into the matter for the Secretary and General Clay.

3. That Judge Rives will report directly to the Secretary as to what corrective actions have been or should be taken.

4. That the allegations involve at least one major general, as well as some other officers and officers' wives, and may also involve civilian personnel.

Army Statement

The Army Department, asked about reports that an inquiry was under way, gave this reporter and another reporter the following statement:

"In answer to queries the Department of the Army stated that it has recently received charges of black marketing, customs violation and similar misconduct of American personnel in Germany, parallel to charges received from time to time in the past.

"Some days ago, Secretary of vised General Clay of these the Army Kenneth C. Royall adcharges in detail and General Clay has indicated that he will investigate them fully. The Secretary has made available to General Clay for this purpose the services of a special representative of the Secretary who is now in the theater."

In Response to Queries

The Army Department's statement was issued in response to ueries put in by Joseph T. Sherman, Washington correspondent of the Greensboro (N. C.) Daily News, and this reporter, who collaborated in digging into the reports that serious charges had been filed with the Secretary.

The Army Department did not elaborate on its announcement.

However, it is known that the investigation will deal with such "items" as these:

1. A major general will be questioned about reports that he used about 166 packing crates to pack his "household effects" for shipment home. He will also be asked what the crates contained and where they are now. (One rumor which proved untrue was that the crates had been seized on a ship docking in New York and had been stored pending the investigation. The crates were not, in fact, on that ship. It is not know in Washington just where they are.)

2. The major general and other officers will be questioned about reports that high officers were freely supplied with inspection cards signed in advance by the "inspector"—cards that were not supposed to be affixed to packing cases until after the contents had been examined. (It appeared certain tonight that an order will be issued providing that no card be signed or offered until after inspector who signs it has personally examined the contents of cases and has seen them nailed up.)

Fiancee Law Involved

3. A major will be questioned about an illeged violation of the alien fiancee law. This law permits such fiancees to bring "household goods" into the United States. The report is that the major arranged for his "fiancee" to bring in a large amount of "household goods." The report also is that, by prearrangement, she was than "jilted," and returned to Europe minus the household goods but supposedly some wealthier.

4. Certain post exchange employes will be questioned about reports of widespread violation of an order intended to prevent cigarettes from going to American personnel in such quantities as to permit them to get into the black market.

5. Some wives will be questioned about reports that they or dered unusually large quantities of coffee and shortening from the United States and then tossed them into the black market, where they rival cigarettes in value. (A result of this report is that the postoffice henceforth will scrutinize incoming and outgoing parcels.)

These are only a few of the charges that have been received by Secretary Royall.

Army Department sources said he ordered the investigation as soon as he learned of the charges because he is determined that the Army's name shall not be besmirched by either Army or civilian offenders, and that swift punishment shall be meted out if the charges are true. The Army Department sources emphasized that there was no reflection whatever on General Clay in the Secretary's action, and that the Secretary has complete confidence in General Clay's integrity.

Judge Rives, who will represent Secretary Royall, had been in Germany investigating the progress of denazification program. He had intended to return home soon, but his return will now be delayed.

Living Harder for 72% in U. S.; Only Farmers Lightly Pinched

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 19.—Almost three quarters of the American population are finding it more difficult to balance their budgets than they did just a year ago.

Those fortunate people who are having an easier time are limited to three out of every hundred. One out of four feels his financial picture is just about the same as in 1946, neither blacker nor rosier.

The pinch of rising costs pressing against family income is lightest among the Nation's farmers. About four out of 10 farmers say their situation is at least no worse than last year. With proportionately more farmers than any other group feeling this way, their satisfaction with how things are going may show itself at the polls next November, with "approval" votes for the party in power.

Throughout the Nation, Institute interviewers asked representative voters this question:

Compared with last year, are you finding it harder, easier, or about the same to make both ends meet?

The national results:

|---|---|
| Harder | 72% |
| Easier | 3 |
| About same | 25 |

The following occupational table shows the more favorable economic position in which the agricultural population finds itself:

| Occupation | Harder | Easier | About Same |
|---|---|---|---|
| Prof. & Bus. | 70% | 3% | 27% |
| White Collar | 76 | 3 | 21 |
| Farmers | 58 | 4 | 38 |
| Man. workers | 76 | 2 | 22 |

College-trained people apparently are weathering the period of rising costs somewhat better than those with less education. Oddly enough, despite the wage increases secured by labor unions, fewer non-union workers than union members say that things are more difficult than last year.

Dollar at 61 Cents

According to recent Government figures, the purchasing value of the dollar, considering the 1940 dollar as equal to 100 cents, is now about 61 cents. It was nearer to 70 cents a year ago.

The real value of weekly wages now is lower than in the latter part of 1945 and 1946 when the first and second round of wage increases were demanded. Thus the statistical stage setting is being built for a third wave of wage demands.

The high cost of living is formidable if one looks back a few months or years. A comparison with 1929 and 1939, however, shows that the average individual can purchase from one third to 40 per cent more with his income than he could then.

Senate Votes Added Millions For Reclamation in West

By The Associated Press

Supplemental appropriations totaling $32,011,000 for five Western reclamation projects were approved today by the Senate.

By this action, the Senate agreed to appropriations voted by the House for Columbia Basin, Central Valley, Davis Dam and the Colorado-Big Thompson, and added $72,000 for the Deschutes project in Oregon.

Grants for the other four projects as voted by House and Senate in the supplemental appropriation bill were:

Davis Dam, $2,800,000; Colorado-Big Thompson, $4,150,000; Central Valley, $11,405,000, and Columbia Basin, $13,554,000.

The Senate Appropriations Committee had recommended only $10,700,000 for Central Valley and $11,725,000 for Columbia Basin, and had sought to amend the House bill for this purpose.

Opposition to the committee figures was led by Senators Magnuson (D., Wash.) and Cordon (R., Oreg.), who first obtained restoration of the original Columbia Valley appropriation to the bill. Later the Senate agreed to accept the House figure for Central Valley.

The figures proposed by the committee, with the exception of Deschutes, were the same as the Budget Bureau first requested. The House Apropriations Committee increased the amounts for Columbia Basin and Central Valley on its own initiative.

Central Union Mission Now Gives Homeless Men Work

Post Reporter

Homeless men are now working at the Central Union Mission, 613 C st. nw., instead of wandering the streets after a meal and lodging.

This new approach is paying dividends in regenerated men, claims the Rev. Herbert E. Eberhardt, superintendent.

One man who sold laundry equipment in better days is now in charge of the laundry. A former tax collector in a large New England city is now the mission's bookkeeper.

Reilly

"It pays to give a man a chance, spiritually and materially," observes Mr. Eberhardt, adding:

"Many of these men whom we used to feed at the mission would leave afterward, ostensibly to seek work, but usually to end up in the nearby park, drink "canned heat" or sleep it off. But under our new plan, we are helping men refind themselves by doing jobs at the mission similar to what they did in their balmier days."

The mission has arranged a dinner for homeless men Christmas Day at 1 p. m.

FATHER REILLY HONORED

The Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, has been reelected president of the Marian Federation of the United States. It is an organization dedicated to special devotions to the Blessed Mother. By the way, the annual Red Mass is set for January 25 at 11 a. m. at the Shrine. It marks the reconvening of courts and Congress.

NEW YULE ANTHEM

Paul Callaway, organist-choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral, has composed a new Christmas anthem, "Hark, the Glad Sound," which will be sung tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Anacostia Methodist Church, 14th and U sts. se. Also to be heard at the service will be "Allelula," a recent work by Dr. Randall Thompson, of the music faculty of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville.

Carols in Chevy Chase

Young people of Chevy Chase Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Shepherd st. nw., will sing carols in the neighborhood Christmas Eve at 8:30 p. m., returning to the church for recreation and refreshments. A Christmas Eve candlelight service is set for 11 p. m.

"Goodwill is more than an amiable disposition; it is an extension of the self to others in the realm of service. Let us translate the goodwill of Christmastide into kindness and consideration; into service and helpfulness. Christ is God's great gift to mankind. One on the Aisle—

The Cabinet Darling

and

Anderson Learns Backstage Jive

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT THE TOWN: June Knight muses about the easy familiarity of backstage life which can so easily be misconstrued by outsiders . . . For five years June was a housewife, having nothing to do with the theater, and she knows how the "darlings" and "beautifuls" of backstage vocabulary can fall on unaccustomed ears . . . The other night after "Sweethearts," Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Anderson called backstage; June had known them in her Texas marriage days . . . The Secretary knocked on the door . . . "Who is it?" asked June . . . "Clinton Anderson," he replied . . . "Ooooh," screamed June, "Clint, darling, come in!" . . . All of a sudden, June realized that this was hardly the respectful way to address a Cabinet officer of the United States . . . "Fortunately," smiled June, "Mrs. Anderson understood and couldn't have been pleasanter about it. When I was married," June goes on, "it was much the same. I was to sing a song Cole Porter wrote for me in a new show and my fiance came to rehearsals. The 'dears' and 'darlings' were too much for him and he said I would have to choose between him and Cole's song. Being in love, I took him. The song, by the way, was 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy,' and when I met Mary Martin last year, Mary took my hand and said: 'I've always wanted to shake the hand that's fed me.' Wasn't that nice?" . . . June's as energetic offstage as she is on . . . They weren't shown here because June hasn't gotten around to the new members of "Sweethearts" but she's done water colors of the cast (first the sketch, then the water color, finally a dry wash) and mighty fine they are, too, particularly a stately one of Marjorie Gateson and a wry, dry impression of Bobby Clark . . . June's parents are coming on from California with her adopted son, Walter Scott Craig 3d, aged 10, to celebrate Christmas in Pittsburgh . . . For her big boy, June's got a football suit added to her masses of white luggage . . . "It's my first tour," June explains, "and gradually I'm cutting down on luggage pieces each town we go through. Soon I'll be an expert!" . . . Soon, heck, June is an expert—double jointed, at that.

MILT SLOSSER has his work cut out for him next Friday night. He'll be playing piano accompaniment for "Adam and Evil" at a midnight show at the Palace. "Adam Evil"? That is a 20-year-old comedy, starring Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle, which Metro has dusted off to make you realize that movies have improved more than somewhat the last score of years. The Capitol's topman, Gene Ford, played the planner for the crix at a showing yesterday afternoon, but halfway through Gene poohed out on us. For the showing on the twenty-sixth, Milt will have an appropriate score worked out and Kay DeWitt will be on deck to chant "The Curse of an Aching Heart." You're right, the song's period doesn't fit with the picture, but when you watch the flick you may suspect the film style is more antique.

FRANCES STARR, that was, dining with Marjorie Gateson last night, two of David Belasco's bright figures at a Washington dinner table. Miss Starr is more precisely Mrs. Frances Starr Whitten of Kalorama rd., but we hope it won't be too long before she finds another script that interests her. It took "Claudia" to bring her back to the footlights and surely another worthy script will turn up again. While they were chatting another bright lady was recalled, one who'd sent La Gateson a particularly handsome Christmas card—Bevery Bayne, who, by the way, followed Miss Starr in "Claudia."

MRS. DOROTHY DAVINO, of 834 Yuma st. se., is keeping her fingers crossed for her son's Hollywood screen test next week. Ralph Van Tassel, her 17-year-lad, was in a Hollywood restaurant when James Melton spotted him and has landed him in at one of the top studios. Ralph's mother is hoping it will be an extra special Christmas.

NANCY DONOVAN, the singing lass on the Capitol stage, says she owes her Cinderella-like saga to roller skates and the National Anthem. Seems she was indulging in her favorite sport one night when the rink band started "Oh, say, can you see." Everyone started singing, but Nancy's voice floated out above the others, and before the anthem was over a chance passerby had offered her a singing job, which led to a Shubert musical, the club and vaudeville.

HARVARD AND PRINCETON old grads are pressing their tails and slipping ticket stubs for Lisner Auditorium in their wallets. Tomorrow night the Hasty Pudding Club stages "Here's the Pitch," and Tuesday night Princeton's Triangle Club will be along, "All Rights Reserved."

WEEKEND BRIEFS: Yes, that is THE Dusty Fletcher at the Gayety, the real "Open the Door, Richard" comic . . . "Hungry Hill," with Margaret Lockwood, Arthur Sinclair and Cecil Parker in the Daphne du Maurier story of an Irish feud, opens today at the Hippodrome . . . Tonight at 8:30, the International Student House is showing "La Kermesse Heroique," or "Carnival in Flanders" . . . Tomorrow at 8 p. m., Community Education, 914 20th st., will screen "Alexander Nevsky."

WELCOME CARD: Gloria Henry reminds you that the Christmas mailing season has reached an all-time peak. Your next peek at Gloria will be in the film version of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Adventures of Silverado"

General Lee Will Serve Church

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, whose role as American commander in Italy caused a controversy, will become general secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, a laymen's organization of the Protestant Episcopal Church, a church spokesman said today.

A spokesman for the Episcopal National Church said that Lee, who will be retired from the Army December 31 on grounds of physical disability, will assume the post next month without salary.

The brotherhood is a laymen's organization which works through the Episcopal Church, organizing men in daily prayer groups to carry on an evangelistic program and seeking to bring men and boys into the church.

Havana Trade Parley Accused of Dawdling

Havana, Dec. 19 (AP).—A South African delegate today accused the Havana Trade Conference of dawdling in its job of working out a charter for an international trade organization, and declared that "if this continues we'll still be here in 1949."

Speaking in the committee on employment and economic activities, South African J. E. Holloway complained about the technicality of the debate and a suggestion to send a one-paragraph clause on labor standards back to a subcommittee which already had considered it.

Cecelia Ager

Within the past couple of years four British movies written, produced and directed by Michael Powell and Emerio Pressburger, Colonel Blimp, Stairway to Heaven, Black Narcissus, and yesterday at the Sutton, I Know Where I'm Going, have been released in America—each one a passport to a new and enriching adventure, each one a presentation of a fresh and exhilerating locale.

Their studies are thorough, lively, educational, and always interesting and entertaining, for they are gifted with a stimulating point of view, and know exactly how to express it. Their work is civilized and worldly, blessed with the light and even at times the lyric touch, and yet essentially, profoundly moral and human. It always displays an appreciation and respect for spiritual values. It always honors the dignity of man. It never fails to find some integrity of character in even the least of us. It never fails to be, somehow, uplifting.

In I Know Where I'm Going, they have pushed back the movie horizon once again, this time to marvel at shy but proud Scotland. At first thought this would seem a dour venture, but as Powell and Pressburger unfold it, it pulsates with all the glorious Biblical virtures. It is rock-ribbed all right, but not so much with austerity as with deep and endearing sentiment.

By means of a tender and true love story developing between Wendy Hiller as a sensitive English girl bent upon luxury and money - made social position through marriage, and Roger Livesey as a noble and money - poor Scot, Powell and Pressburger have composed a peasen to Scotland and the Scots, a moving tribute to their stern land and admirable character.

As they point out with grace and delicacy, and complete conviction, and as Miss Hiller comes to realize, the poverty of the Scots in material things is as nothing compared with the wealth of their spirit, their personal dignity, their independence, their love of their native land and their love and respect for their neighbors, their pride and security in their firm roots, their strength of character, their forthright recognition of the fundamental values. Though they have little money and their life is hard, they are rich in the good, the true, the lasting things in life; they are rich in everything that not only makes life worth living, but a joy to live out.

This glimpse of a little corner of Scotland is filled with beguiling incident, enchantingly rugged characters, scenic beauty, affectionate humor, honest drama and genuine sympathetic appeal. It is a modest picture and a lovely one. It has no movie glamor but it has a luminous soul.

'Skins Make It Official—Gilmer Is Bonus Choice

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE REDSKINS are getting a break in the luck, perhaps, with the announcement that their first choice in the college draft, Harry Gilmer of Alabama, has also been claimed by the Brooklyn Dodgers of the All-America Conference.

POVICH

Thus the Redskins are delivered from the prospect they might have had to bid for Gilmer's services against one of the rich clubs of the AAC. Brooklyn is a comparatively impoverished team that took a whopping financial loss the past season, and hardly is in condition to go high in the bidding for Gilmer.

It could have been a dreary outlook for the Redskins if Gilmer had been claimed by Los Angeles or New York or Cleveland or the other rich, spendthrift teams of the AAC. Brooklyn, with a talented passer in Bob Hoernschmeyer, is not in distress at that position and probably won't go high for Gilmer.

But the Redskins may not be out of the woods yet in their quest for Gilmer, whom they doubtless would groom as a successor to Sammy Baugh. Brooklyn could outbid them and sell him at a profit to a club like the Yankees, which lacks a passer.

WHICHEVER TEAM lands Gilmer will be getting something of a prize. Some football men rate him the slickest college passer since Baugh graduated from TCU in 1936, including Davey O'Brien and Johnny Lujack. The pros have been scouting him for three years now, and they'll be watching him eagerly in the Sugar Bowl when Alabama plays Texas on January 1.

Coach Steve Owen of the New York Giants admitted that his mouth was watering for a passer like Gilmer before he came up with Paul Governali, of Boston. After being deprived of Frankie Filchock's services following the betting scandal last year, Owen said: "If we had Gilmer, I think we'd win the Eastern championship in 1947."

Gilmer is a little fellow as forward passers go but in the trade he is known as a big little man, with sturdy legs and powerful shoulders. On the optional pass-or-run plays, he can leg it with the ball, and his lack of height is seemingly no handicap when he chooses to throw, because he pitches the ball while leaping in the air. It may be unorthodox, in contrast to the set passes of other throwers, but Gilmer has made his style pay off.

FOR GILMER and the other campus heroes who are tabbed as professional football timber, it will be a sad day when, and if, the two pro leagues ever suspend their present war and agree on peace terms including a common draft. Recognition of each other's draft rights by the NFL and the AAC would be a sock to the graduating college stars.

As long as it's war, however, the campus stars are in a beautiful bargaining position, enabled to weigh one offer against the other, and then make their choice on a profit basis. Most of the men now in football can remember the lean days before the AAC entered the field, when the National League had a monopoly and graduating collegians were at their mercy if they wanted to play pro football.

Before 1945, the college player who was claimed by an NFL club had no alternative except to sign at the club's terms, or stay out of pro football. It amounted to a tight boycott against collegians who held out for bigger bonuses or more salary. The arrival of the AAC changed the picture, however, and the college stars could shop around for the best offer.

CLUB OWNERS freely predict that when the two leagues do agree on common draft procedure that would respect the draft rights of all the clubs, player salaries will go down as much as 33 per cent. That's what the players have to fear. They can scarcely be blamed for hoping the current war between the two leagues never ends.

The football players never had it so good. The $5000-a-year man, who used to be one of the high-paid figures of professional football, is now a lower-bracket performer. The $10,000-a-year man is common in the lineups of both leagues, with salaries driven up by the competitive bidding of the two leagues.

In 1936, Sammy Baugh was the most publicized college football player in the land. When the Redskins signed him, it was at a $500 bonus. As an example of how the trend has gone since the AAC entered the field to compete in the bidding, Charley Trippi commanded $100,000 for three years when he signed with the Cardinals last season, fresh out of Georgia U.

Hoyas Sock VPI, 66-51, As Players Scrap It Out

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

V. P. I.'s basketball winning streak came to an abrupt halt at one last night but Georgetown knew it was in a ball game before coming through, 66-51.

The Hoyas racked up their fifth straight at Catholic U. gym despite a rash action by Capt. Andy Kostecka that put him out of the game with nine minutes to play.

With the score 49-42, Georgetown, Kostecka was driving for the basket when Guard Jack Chambers fell in front of him. For no apparent reason, Kostecka deliberately kicked him. Several VPI players rushed the Hoya captain and, according to Referee Curly White, Forward Crenshaw Reed took a swing at Kostecka.

Official Wins, as Usual

Both men were banished from further play. Four minutes later, Coach Red Laird tried to send Reed back into the game. Laird insisted that Reed hadn't been in at the time of the incident. White was equally insistent that Reed was the man. White won the argument.

Georgetown continued to play a spotty brand of basketball. In the second half it took five full minutes for the Hoyas to register their first goal.

Meanwhile V. P. I, led by Center Bob Dickson, who scored 18 points, cut the Georgetown margin to seven points. The Gobblers couldn't get closer. Every time they manaced, Georgetown matched their scoring efforts.

O'Keefe Paces Hoyas

Kostecka, who had averaged 22 points in four previous games, scored 13 in the first half but got only one basket in the second. Tommy O'Keefe took over, scoring 11 of his 16 points after intermission.

The Virginia Poly team played an agressive game, featured by the fine flor play of Bert Wrinton and Jack Chambers. If the Gobblers shooting average hadn't been so poor they would have given Georgetown more of a scare.

Thompson, Tew Named In Regular Draft Picks

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Pittsburgh, Dec. 19.—Stealing the show from other National Football League officials assembled here for the annual player draft tonight, the Washington Redskins today made it official that Alabama's Harry Gilmer was their bonus choice.

Gilmer, 21-year-old triple-threater, weighing 168 pounds, is the player chosen by the 'Skins in the annual lottery which gives one N. F. L. team the first, and pre-draft meeting, choice of the country's talent.

According to McCann he is almost a cinch to wear the burgundy and gold next year.

"Gilmer will sign a Redskin contract after he plays in the Sugar Bowl game on New Year's Day."

Skins Get Tew, Thompson

The New York Giants, who rated first pick, chose Tony Minisi, Pennsylvania's All-America halfback.

The Redskins' first two regular draft selections were Lowell Tew, Alabama fullback from Waynesboro, Miss., and Tommy Thompson, a center whose home is at Belmar, N. J. Thompson is a junior at William and Mary.

The Skins next took Dan Sandifer, halfback from Louisiana State University, as their third choice; and then followed with two other backs, Jack Weisenburger from Michigan and Jack Kurkowski from the University of Detroit.

Cards Pick Spavital

The Chicago Cardinals announced as their first two choices Jim Spavital, a back from Oklahoma A and M., and Bill Smith, a tackle from the University of North Carolina.

The Boston Yanks made the following first four selections: Vaughn Mancha, Alabama center; John Nolan, Penn State tackle; Earl Cook, Southern Methodist University guard, and Bill Healey, guard from Georgia Tech.

Without naming the order in which the selections were made, Fred Mandel, owner of the Detroit Lions, announced the following eight selections:

Les Bingaman, 260-pound Illinois tackle; Don Doll,, back, from the University of South California; Fred Enke, jr., the country's leading offensive back, from Arizona; Jim Minor, Arkansas tackle; George Quist, Stanford back; Moroni Schwab, tackle, from Utah State; W. A. Little, quarterback from Louisiana State University, and Robert Williamson, 250-pound Hobart tackle.

Eagles Take Scott

The Philadelphia Eagles, while declining to give the order in which selections were made, announced they had drafted Clyde (Smackover) Scott, a former Navy back now playing with Arkansas, and had made these other top selections:

Scott Baseley, end, Nevada; Paul Campbell, quarterback, Texas Christian; Howard Duncan, center, Ohio State; Jack Myers, back, UCLA; Buddy Tinsley, tackle, Baylor; and Martin Wendell, guard, Notre Dame.

The Cardinals also added to their list of draftees Jay Smith, a defensive end from Mississippi Southern.

George Halas, owner and coach of the Chicago Bears, after announcing he would not disclose any of his selections changed his mind and said one of his high picks was Knox Ramsey, a guard from William and Mary. Ramsey is a brother of Garrard Ramsey, former All-America guard now playing with the Chicago Cardinals.

Because of the absence of several owners, including the Redskins' George Marshall, the meeting was expected to accomplish little besides settling the question of which teams have the National League right to what players.

Senior leaguers must still compete in the signing of talent with the All-American Conference, which had its player draft earlier in the week.

Vital Items to be Referred

Several important items may be discussed before Commissioner Bell, but a vote on policy or anything else must wait until the owners' meeting in January.

Topping the agenda then probably will be such matters as:

1. Philadelphia Owner Alexis Thompson's demand for a common draft between the National League and All-America Conference.

2. Owner Marshall's recent blast, in which he suggesteed the National League champion be withdrawn from the annual all-star game in Chicago.

3. The future ownership of the Detroit Lions, now being put up for sale by Fred Mendel.

Besides Gilmer, the Redskins have rights to a number of aces just finishing their collegiate careers. Included are Mississippi's Charley Conerly, S. M. U.'s Sid Halliday and Southern California's John Ferraro.

Owned by other National League teams, by draft if not actually, are such stellar performers as Notre Dame's George Connor and Johnny Lujack, Penn's Charley Bednarik, Mississippi's George Poole and Michigan's Bob Chappuis.

Tangerine Bowl Has Colorful Rivals in Marshall, Catawba

West Virginia Team Wins 9 of 11 Starts; Wetzel High Scorer

By Clyde Ball

Huntington, W. Va., Dec. 19 (AP). Marshall College, which meets Catawba in the Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Fla., New Year's Day, has turned out football teams that have won 64 per cent of their games in the past 10 seasons and Cam Henderson, the man in the driver's seat, has hardly given a passing glance any system other than the old single wing.

In that regard, he's like Gordon (Chubby) Kirkland, whose teams at Catawba have been victorious 100 times, lost 28 and tied 6 in 13 campaigns.

This year, in winning 9 of 11 games, Marshall's offensive-minded team ran up a total of 342 points to 118 for the opposition. It lost to Canisius, 20 to 25, and to Xavier of Cincinnati, 7 to 18.

Big Marvin Wetzel, hard-driving sophomore fullback of Mannington, W .Va., accounted for 108 points personally and his running mate, Sophomore Wingback Chuck Fieldson of Mount Hope, W. Va., tallied 84 markers.

The excellent performance of this year's Marshall team was quite a surprise, even to Coach Henderson and his assistants. In 1946 virtually the same line-up lost seven games and won only two.

But the past fall, the Marshall squad of 30 men improved steadily and developed such a heavy scoring punch that it was held to one touchdown in only two games.

Indians Defeated Only by VMI, 13-6; Injured Star Back

By Herman Helms

Salisbury, N. C., Dec. 19.—The Catawba Indians, hard at work prepping for their Tangerine Bowl meeting with strong Marshall College, hope to be in top physical trim for the big battle at Orlando, Fla., New Year's night.

A recent announcement by the medics that Harold Bowen, passing and kicking great of the Tribe, would be ready to play, left only Sub End Fred Fisher unavailable for the bowl game.

Bowen, who missed the Tribe's last three regular season games, has hobbled about on crutches since he suffered a badly twisted knee against Presbyterian here in early November. Until hurt, he owned one of the finest passing figures in football.

Bob Gore, sophomore speedster from Salisbury, N. C., assumed Bowen's tailback duties in the final games on the Tribe's regular card and did a creditable job. Gore will doubtless start at tailback against Marshall, but Tribe followers are hopeful that Bowen will get in to pitch and kick before it's all over.

The Indians, copped their seventh North State Conference crown in a row and lost only to a Southern Conference entry, VMI, in a late September thriller.

The Tribe limited the opposition to a scant 27-point total. VMI, who won, 13-6, and Guilford, who managed to score 14, but lost, 20-14, were the only clubs to dent the Indians' goal.

Against Marshall, the Indians will attempt to extend a record of having scored in 76 consecutive games.

Lions Defeat Cleveland, 5-3

Two last-period goals by Johnny Carr-Harris and Larry Archambeault gave the Washington Lions a stunning upset triumph over the crack Cleveland Barons, 5-3, before a crowd of fewer than 1000 last night at Uline Arena.

Carr-Harris took a pass from Dan Porteous and rammed the rubber past Goalie Roger Bessette early in the final period.

The Lions held this lead until the last minute, when, with the Cleveland goalie withdrawn from the ice in favor of a sixth forward, the Lions' Archambeault lofted a shot from his own goal which traveled the length of the ice into the unguarded Cleveland net.

The teams battled evenly throughout the first two periods, with the score standing 3-3 as the final session began.

Cleveland's Pete Leswick gave the visitors a 1-0 lead after two minutes of play, but the Lions came back to lead 2-1 at the end of the first stanza on goals by Johnny Carr-Harris and Red Raney.

In the second period, Leswick's second goal of the evening pulled the Barons even again, but Bob Walton tallie dto move the Lions in front midway through the period. However, Fred Thurier, rangy Baron center, knocked a shot past goalie Gordon Bell to deadlock the score once again.

The lineups:

There's Little to Choose Between Mize and Kiner

New York, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Johnny Mize of the New York Giants and Ralph Kiner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, long distance clouters par excellence, wound up in a virtual dead-heat for the National League's 1947 slugging crown according to official averages released today.

They also tied for the home runs title with 51 each.

Kiner, in his second season with the Pirates, registered the highest slugging percentage with Mize a step behind, while the Giant first baseman won the runs-batted-in title and Kiner finished runnerup.

In slugging percentage, which is compiled on the basis of extra base hits in total number of times at bat, Kiner finished with .639 and Mize with .614. Mize took the runs-batted-in crown with 138 and the Pirates outfielder was second with 127.

The race for most total bases was the closest with Kiner winning by one base over Mize, 361 to 360.

Catcher Walker Cooper, Mize's teammate, finished third in slugging percentage and runs-batted-in. The burly Giant receiver had a .586 slugging mark and drove in 122 runs.

Willard Marshall, Giant outfielder, was third in total bases with 310 and Cooper was fourth with 302. Three other players in addition to mize, Kinzer and Cooper, drove in 100 or more runs.

Bob Elliott of the Braves batted in 113, Marshall 17, and George (Whitey) Kurowski of the Cardinals 104. Outfielder Enos Slaughter of St. Louis, runs-batted-in titleholder during 1946 with 130, sent across only 86 teammates the past season.

Hank Greenberg of Pittsburgh drew the most bases on balls, 104, followed by Pee Wee Reese of Brooklyn, with 102, and Kiner with 98.

Bill Bennings

At Charles Town.

DEAR FOLKS:

The meeting comes to a close today with the running of the Waterford Purse, a test at 7 furlongs. Heading the list of probable starters is J. E. Crider's Comedy Player, who has yet failed to grace the winner's circle although close up in all his engagements. E. L. Poston's consistent White Easter also has been named. Despite the fact that the racing strip has been off all week, the session has been a huge success. A daily mutuel average of $233,000 will be hung up for the 18-day meeting. Not bad, considering that Gulf Stream Park in Florida average is only around the $400,000 mark. Bill Irvine, onetime trainer for the late Edward F. Whitney and other prominent sportsmen, is confined to Sinai Hospital in Baltimore. Upon his recovery the popular veteran will leave for Hot Springs, Ark. Tyson Gilpin, president of the Fastig-Gilpin Co., just returned from California, where he made arrangements to auction off the L. B. Mayer fabulous establishment on January 14. The popular mare Smiling Lass, owned by George Perry of Upper Marlboro, Md., ended her racing career during the current meeting. The daughter of War Hero will be bred to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's New World. Dan Chamblin, one of the leading trainers during the meeting, will ship his large string to winter quarters Saturday. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Baird Rides Four Winners at Charles Town

Jim Takes Both Ends Of 'Double'

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 9.—Jockey Jimmy Baird stole the spotlight at this popular West Virginia course this afternoon, bagging four winners on the eight-race program to move within striking distance of his rival Ted Atkinson as the third leading rider of the 1947 season.

The quartet of victories brought his total for the year to 228 just four back of the rival and his twenty-first during the meeting here.

Not only did Baird win both ends of the daily double, but he piloted Stevens Stable's Asaider to an easy triumph in the Fenelon Purse the afternoon feature attraction.

Six Out of Seven in Money

Baird had six mounts during the afternoon, and only on one occasion did he finish out of the money, when Calendar in the fifth event after laying in second place finished far back, despite the fact that the mild mannered war veteran drove him vigorously all the way.

In the seventh event his final mount, Gallant finished third back of Kai Lee. The Pennsylvania rider has only one more day to overtake Atkinson as the session ends Saturday, and his next appearance will be in January at Florida's Sunshine Park.

In the headliner, Baird's ride astride Asaider was a masterpiece.

Content to lay behind the swift pace set by Mrs. G. O. Russell's Under Cover until swinging around the home bend, Baird sent the filly up fast and assuming command held the daughter of Sky Raider together cleverly to stave off the determined challenge of Mrs. H. R. Miller's Alimony.

Under Cover Third

In third place came the tiring Under Cover. Asaider, one of the favorites in the betting, paid $5.80 for $2 while she stepped the seven furlongs in 1:26 3/5 over a slow racing strip.

Baird started the ball rolling when he piloted S. Applestein's Freeboy to victory in the first race. The 7-year-old gelding was making his first appearance during the meeting, but once Baird gave him his head turning into the homestretch to leave his rivals behind to win by four lengths. His payoff was $8.40.

In the second event, the final half of the daily double, Jimmy had the leg up on Edward Denham's Prime Minister, the favorite, and once he got the gray gelding moving hitting the homestretch he won in a common gallop.

Payoff Only $16

The combination which consisted of "2 and 4" paid only $16. The fans sensed that this looked like strictly a "Baird day" and sent the chips in on J. N. Barnes' Rugged in the following event.

It took the superior riding of Baird, however, to bring the son of Morgil home in advance of his seven rivals.

Count On, ridden by Stanley Austin, was winged along in front turning for home and seemed to have the event all tucked away when suddenly he bored to the outside fence.

Baird, moving along in second place, drove Rugged through to take over and win by three full lengths. His mutuel return was $5.40 while the gathering of 4000 fans gave him a rousing reception upon returning to the saddling enclosure.

Baldwin Gets 9

Colts Lose To Patterson Park, 44-28

Although their leading scoring threat, Mel Baldwin, was held to nine points, Patterson Park's Clippers of Baltimore defeated Calvin Coolidge's Colts, 44-28, yesterday at Coolidge.

The victory was the third within a week for the Parkers over a Washington team, the Baltimore interhigh champs having previously beaten Eastern and Anacostia.

It was the opening game for Washington's high school titlists.

Baldwin, the 16-year-old Patterson Park sophomore, who had tallied 43 points in the two previous games, was held by Bobby Rohr to three field goals, all scored in the first half.

Vern Schweiger took up the slack, tallying 12 for the Parkers. Also instrumental in the Patterson Park victory were the fine rebound recoveries of 6 foot, 3 inch Bob Gulas.

The Colts trailed, 7-5, in the first quarter and 20-9 at the half. Their best quarter was the third.

At one time, they crept back to within eight points of the Parkers, but the Baltimoreans had too many reserves, and the rallying Colts ran out of gas.

Fairfax Loses, 39-33

Maury High of Norfolk (Va.) put on a 12-point scoring spurt in the final period to defeat Fairfax, 39-33, at the latter's gym yesterday. The losers were held to four points in that payoff period after they had battled on even terms for most of the game.

It was the third straight loss for Fairfax.

Welterweight Paul Oliver lost a three-round decision to Leon Daughtery in Thursday night's Golden Gloves tournament. The Washington Post erroneously reported Oliver as losing by a TKO.

Caps Looking for Fifth Win In Row Against St. Louis

Washington's Capitols will be driving for their fifth consecutive Basketball Association of America victory tonight when they entertain Coach Ken Loeffler's St. Louis Bombers at Uline Arena, 8:30 o'clock.

The Caps, after winning but four of their first 11 games, have come back to take two decisions over the Western Division leading Baltimore Bullets, while routing the Providence Steamrollers and winning over the Chicago Stags.

The Bombers and Caps have split two decisions to date, while St. Louis more recently ended a nine-game winning streak for the Bullets in Baltimore, 65-51, and upset the Stags by 10 points.

The Capitols currently are crediting "Sonny" Hertzberg, new forward, with their recent rise.

"We needed a floor man and good shot badly, and 'Sonny' has filled the bill splendidly," Coach Red Auerbach said last night. "He's not only contributed 36 points to our four-game winning streak, but has set up some of our better plays."

John Mahnken, 6-foot-8-inch center, also has contributed much to the Caps' streak by coming through with fine performances against Baltimore's Kleggie Hermsen and Chicago's Stan Miasek, two of the association's finer centers.

Quantico Given Even Chance

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP).—The Quantico (Va.) Marines and the Alameda (Calif.) Naval Air Station Hellcats were rated about even by sports writers here today as they went through light workouts for their All-Navy football championship game at Balboa Stadium tomorrow.

Advance ticket sales indicated a capacity crowd of 25,000. The turnout will include a dozen Marine Corps generals and nearly as many admirals, with Rear Admiral Oscar C. Badger, commandant of the Eleventh Naval District, as host.

Both squads include players who were college or prep school stars before entering the services.

Quantico, coached by Lieut. Col. Marvin "Moose" Stewart, formerly of Louisiana State, has a quartet of former Naval Academy Players: Center Bill Jesse, Tackle Joe Donahue, End Tom Dawson and Halfback Joe Bartos.

The outstanding ground-gainer of the Alameda team is Halfback Joe "Juggernaught" Perry, who played with Jordan High School, Los Angeles, and Compton Junior College.

Francis Quits Kansas State

Topeka, Kans., Dec. 19 (AP).—Sam Francis, former All-America fullback at the University of Nebraska, stepped out today as head football coach at Kansas State College, a Big Six school which hasn't enjoyed a victory on the gridiron since 1944.

No successor was announced immediately.

Francis' resignation, originally submitted October 19 after the Kansas State Wildcats had lost a 47-7 game to the University of Missouri for their fifth defeat of the year, was accepted at a meeting of the State board of regents.

Following the announcement Ralph Graham, head football coach at the University of Wichita and a top-rank fullback at Kansas State from 1931 to 1933, said he had "been approached by authorities at Kansas State College" to take the coaching spot but said "I won't have anything definite on my decision until after January 1."

Terps Name Maj. Simler Their Captain

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MAJ. GEORGE SIMLER, a regular Air Force officer assigned to the military science department of the University of Maryland, will captain the Terps in the Gator Bowl game against Georgia.

The appointment of Simler, an end, was announced yesterday by Coach Jim Tatum as the Old Liners held their last rehearsal for the January 1 classic until December 26 when they will resume drills in Jacksonville.

The selection of Simler met with the unanimous approval of the 44-man Maryland squad. Simler, 27, attended Maryland as a freshman in 1940. He captained the Terps in their opening game, a 19-13 victory over South Carolina, this season.

MARYLAND'S LAST practice here was one of its most rigorous. Tatum split the squad into 22-man groups and held a regulation game.

The coaches alternated players late in the skirmish, but the line-up they will use against the Bulldogs was kept intact for most of the brush.

This array had Simler and Fran Evans at ends; Ray Krouse and Jim Goodman at tackles; Tom McHugh and Paul Broglio at guards; Gene Kinney at center; Vic Turyn at quarter; Lu Gambino and Jim LaRue at the halfbacks and Harry Bonk at fullback.

With the exception of Al Phillips, who was replaced at guard by Freshman McHugh, this is the lineup that defeated Vandy, 20-6, when Maryland hit its peak this year.

SPIRIT WAS HIGH as Tatum dismissed the squad for the Christmas holidays with a warning to "keep in shape. We won most of our ball games this year because we were in tiptop condition."

Even Tatum, a professional worrier, didn't appear too concerned about the bowl clash. He said he thought the odds-makers were right in establishing Georgia a 7-point favorite, but said "they'll know they've been in a ball game."

Over 500 Gator Bowl tickets have been sold at Maryland, with most of the Terp rooters planning to go to Jacksonville by automobile.

The squad leaves at 9 a. m. Thursday by chartered plane.

Georgia Has Capable Understudy for Rauch

Athens, Ga., Dec. 19.—Georgia's football squad, kept from practice this week by examinations, will start intensive drills Monday for its 'Gator Bowl clash with the Maryland Terrapins.

Also on Monday, Head Coach Wally Butts will know more about the condition of Johnny Rauch, the team's ace quarterback and one of the best passers in the Nation.

In the event Rauch will not be fit for full-time duty, Butts has an ace up his sleeve in 19-year-old Ray Prosperi, an unheralded but extremely promising freshman passer.

3 Local Teams Hit the Road

This area's big three of college basketball all see action tonight on the road.

The team that's farthest away is George Washington. After risking a 7-0 record last night against South Carolina, the Colonials move on to Clemson.

Georgetown, which has run its unbeaten string to five, looks for its sixth straight victory tonight against Richmond. Maryland also plays closer to home, moving up to Baltimore for an engagement with Johns Hopkins.

The Terrapins, concluding a three-game tour, will be out to get this one on the win side. After losing to Washington and Lee, 70-64, the Terps won over VMI, 53-46, in a rough contest that produced 49 personals.

A victory over Johns Hopkins would give Maryland four victories in six starts. Baltimore's Loyola is the only other team that beat the Terps.

Terps Want Terp With Two Heads

If John C. Pearson, director of the Department of Commerce's acquarium is willing, Maryland will have a new mascot for its January 1 'Gator Bowl game with Georgia.

The Terps would like to borrow "Superdiamond," the twin-headed turtle now being sheltered in the Commerce Aquarium.

"The only thing we have as a mascot is 'Testudo,' a stone terrapin," explained Sports Publicist George Carroll. "'Testudo' weighs about 500 pounds and we can't carry it to Jacksonville. We want something live to match the bulldog that Georgia will bring along as its mascot and that twin-headed terrapin is just the thing.'"

Coach Jim Tatum heartily agreed with Carroll. "Furthermore," Tatum added, "two heads are better than one and we're going to need all the help we can get against Georgia."

Questions, Answers Disclose Purposes of Marshall Plan

of the recipient countries, making clear how the funds are to be used.

Q.—What happens if any of the European money is left at the end of the 4¼-year program?

A.—Before the end of the program the United States and the recipient countries must agree how to dispose of any unused balances.

Q.—How will the United States get the scarce materials it needs for stockpiling?

A.—The European countries will agree to procure what the United States needs from their colonies or home territories, and to sell them for dollars on "reasonable" terms. The dollars will come from the stockpiling fund already voted by Congress.

Q.—Will the United States be expected to supply all Europe's needs?

A.—Not at all. In the first 15 months of the program, for example, the rest of the Western Hemisphere will be expected to supply 9,165,000 tons of bread grains as against 8,195,000 from the United States. Except for dairy products, fruit and cotton, the rest of the hemisphere will be Europe's biggest source of agricultural supplies.

Q.—Who will pay for Europe's supplies that come from outside the United States?

A.—The United States will have to pay for most of them, since most Latin-American countries and Canada are short of dollars. Because of the shortage of American supplies and the pressure on American prices, the plan allows the United States to buy $2,165,000,000 worth of goods from other countries, chiefly in the Western Hemisphere, in the first 15 months.

Q.—Won't the Latin Americans, for example, pay for any of their help to Europe?

A.—Over the full 4¼-year period, the plan calls for 4.1 billion dollars to be provided from outside the United States Treasury—from other Western Hemisphere countries, from the World Bank or from private investors. Latin America and Canada are expected to make free grants on loans totaling 700 million dollars in the first 15 months, and a billion dollars thereafter.

Q.—Does the plan give any incentive to private investors?

A. It provides for Government guaranties to protect private investors in recovery projects against abnormal risks, such as not being able to convert the proceeds of their foreign investments into dollars. If Congress approves, there could be a system of Government insurance of private investments in European recovery.

Q.—Haven't the 16 European countries got gold, dollar securities and other assets that could be used to pay for American supplies?

A.—Their assets of this kind are estimated to total $4,900,000,000, but most of them could not easily be sold for dollars for anything like their true value. Moreover, some of these assets help the Europeans to earn dollars, and selling them would simply postpone the day when Europe will need no more help from the United States.

Q. Do the estimates of costs take account of rising prices in the United States?

A. The estimates are based on the November 30 price level for the first 15 months of the program: thereafter they are based on expectations of declining prices here and in other supplying countries. The spread between 8.3 and 11 billion dollars for the last three years represents to a large extent the allowance that had to be made for varying prices.

Q.—Will the plan affect prices in the United States?

A.—The Administration estimates that it will have no "dangerous" effect on American economy especially since annual exports under the plan will be smaller than during the past year.

Q.—Will some of the 17 billion dollars be used to stabilize European currencies?

A.—No, but if and when the European countries balance their internal budgets, collect taxes, and cut their government expenditures, additional American dollars may be used to create a stabilization fund. Several hundred million dollars are still left in the old United States Stabilization Fund, created in 1936 and used for the most part in 1945 to pay the American contribution to the International Monetary Fund. If more money is required for the United States Stabilization Fund, Congress may be asked later to provide it.

Q.—Will any direct American help go to Russia or her satellites?

A.—No, but the plan is still open to the participation of Russia or any other country which agrees to the economic undertakings already accepted by the 16 nations in the plan.

Q.—Will American dollars help indirectly to bolster the economy of Russia or her satellites?

A.—The plan assumes a steadily increasing trade between western and eastern Europe. It permits western Europe to export goods to eastern Europe processed from from American materials. It forbids western Europe to reexport any goods directly received from the United States.

Q.—How will the plan be managed?

A.—In the United States a small new Government agency will be set up, to be known as the European Cooperation Administration. It will be headed by a $20,000-a-year administrator appointed by the President. The administrator will control all grants and loans under the program.

Q.—Will it take over the duties of other Government agencies involved in foreign economic policy?

A.—No; it will simply expedite the work of procurement, transportation and similar operations now being carried on by the Commerce and Agriculture Departments and other agencies. The Commerce and Agriculture Departments will continue to allocate items in short supply between domestic and total export needs, treating the 16 countries and western Germany as a group. The new agency will then allocate them within the western European group.

Q.—How will a grant be handled?

A.—If it is a grant of grain, which has to be acquired governmentally in this country, the administrator must first approve the European request, than ask the Department of Agriculture to get an allocation from the International Emergency Food Council, and finally ask the Department of Agriculture to buy whatever amount has been allocated. If it is a grant of coal, the administrator must first approve the European request, then extend a credit for the necessary amount of money, and direct the European country to do its own purchasing through normal trade channels here.

Q.—How will a loan be handled?

A.—The administrator must first satisfy himself that the European country needs a loan for specified purposes, and must decide the amount of the loan. When he gets the approval of the National Advisory Council, (the interdepartmental group which determines American foreign lending policies), he will turn over the money to the Export-Import Bank, specifying what the terms of the loan shall be.

Q.—How will the plan function in Europe?

A.—A chief economic cooperation officer will be attached to the American Embassy or Legation in each of the 16 recipient countries. He and his staff will have to see that the conditions of American aid are carried out, that European requirements are carefully "screened" and that technical help is provided where needed. The President will also appoint an official of ambassadorial rank as a central representative to coordinate operations in Europe. The same person may also serve as American delegate to the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe.

Q.—Will the European nations set up an organization of their own?

A.—They promised to do so, and the United States expects the promise to be carried out. It will be up to the Europeans themselves to determine the form of the organization and the extent of its powers.

Q.—Can the 16 European countries meet their announced production goals?

A.—The Administration thinks they can in growing food and mining coal, but not in making finished steel. The Europeans will thus be forced to postpone steel-using projects like housing, at least for the first two years. Instead of using their scarce steel for shipbuilding, the Europeans will get 500 war-built American ships, 200 of them by purchase and 300 by temporary transfer.

Q.—Can the United States supply as much as Europe needs from us?

A.—Not in grains, fats, meats, fertilizer, farming machinery, freight cars, crude or semifinished steel. No scrap steel whatever will be exported, because the United States doesn't have it. However, the United States can meet Europe's requirements of mining machinery and electrical generating equipment. It can supply more than Europe requested in finished steel, motor trucks and petroleum equipment.

Q.—Will the plan make western Europe self-supporting by the end of the 4¼-year period?

A.—Not entirely. Even with good crops, good luck, hard work and civilian self-denial, the 16 countries will still have a dollar deficit of between 2.4 and 3.6 million dollars at the end of the program, in 1952. But by that time the Administration thinks world trade will have revived to such a point that Europe can overcome its deficit by the normal processes of international business, without needing further governmental help from the United States.

Truman to Receive Fala's Successor

By The Associated Press

A two-months-old cocker spaniel, bearing the nickname "Feller," is slated as the White House successor to "Fala."

The pedigreed pup is being sent to President Truman as a Christmas gift by Mrs. Peter Joseph Marsden, Galena, Ill., a former nurse, who once cared for the President's mother.

Unable to care for the dog himself, Mr. Truman has appointed Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, White House physician, as official guardian.

Control Bill Sent Truman

tary to limit until February 1 grain going to distillers.

4. It authorizes the Commodity Credit Corp. to stimulate production of food in non-European countries by extending them technical aid, seeds, fertilizer and farm machinery. Further, the CCC may enter into advance contracts and price guarantees which growers in those countries, so they will be assured a market for their crops.

5. The bill authorizes a one-million-dollar appropriation to carry on a voluntary program for conserving food and feed in this country.

6. It requests the President to submit to Congress detailed programs for dealing with individual scarce commodities. These programs would presumably be in the form of allocation and rationing plans.

7. It authorizes the President to consult with industry for the purpose of drawing up voluntary agreements for allocations of transportation facilities and other scarce commodities, and for regulation of speculative trading on commodity exchanges.

Participants in such agreements, if they were approved by the President and the Attorney General, would be freed from prosecution under the anti-trust laws for their acts under the agreements.

None of the pacts, however, may provide for price controls.

Called 'Counterfeit' By ADA Spokesmen

Americans for Democratic Action yesterday described the stopgap anti-inflation bill sent to President Truman by Congress as "counterfeit" and a "fake substitute formula for stability."

A statement issued by Leon Henderson, chairman of ADA's executive committee, and Paul A. Porter, a member of the organization's national board, said that Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and "the GOP chieftains" have "ducked the all-important issues of price control and rationing."

"If, as seems apparent, the President has no alternative but to sign this do-nothing measure, we strongly urge him to accompany his action with a clear statement branding the Republican bill as a weak and ineffective weapon against inflation," they said.

They urged Mr. Truman to "again challenge the new Congress to approve a genuine anti-inflation program."

County to Collect Trash In Fairlington Strike

Authorities Act To Avert Health Menace as Piles Of Rubbish Mount

Arlington County will resume collection of trash and garbage in strike-bound Fairlington this morning to "avert a health menace."

County Manager A. T. Lundberg ordered collection yesterday following a mounting wave of complaints from Fairlington residents that trash and garbage have piled up in basements since more than 100 AFL union maintenance workers struck 12 days ago.

Residents yesterday fired a barrage of complaints at the Arlington Health Department and at the county government. Their protests also poured into The Washington Post throughout the day.

Refuse Piled in Basements

They told of growing refuse piles in Fairlington basements, of poorly cleaned refuse containers, and of infrequent collections by the Super Service Trash Co., 610 Delaware ave. sw., which has held a contract for trash and garbage removal since the strike began.

Arlington's move was made despite a statement last week from the Fairmac Corp., owner of the 3439-unit Virginia development that "we have enough men on the job to assure continued uninterrupted service."

Arlington first entered the strike picture last week, when two county trucks aided in trash and garbage removal for three days.

But this operation was suspended following protests from the union, local 82, Building Service Employes Union, AFL, that such action aided the Fairmac management in breaking the strike.

Take Problem in Hand

In at least one instance yesterday, Fairlington residents took the problem into their own hands.

A petition signed by 17 Fairlington residents protested the sanitation problem to the Defense Homes Corporation, former development owner, and asked the Government agency to intervene.

The residents, who asked that their names be withheld, based their appeal on a clause in the contract between DHC and Fairmac Corp. providing that the new owner must maintain the same kind of service as before the sale.

Commenting on the petition, Fairmac Corp. president William Ziegler declared it was no use to complain to the DHC, since "they are not the owners any more."

Meantime, one explanation for waning garbage and trash collections were given by Larry Schnall, organizer for the Union's international organization.

According to Schnall, Nathaniel Smith, who operates the Super Service Trash Co., showed up in Fairlington yesterday morning with 17 men to collect garbage.

But after being approached by union pickets, Schnall said, two of the trash removal company's workers signed union membership cards, others took a bus back to Washington, and only two were left to handle the refuse.

Smith last night admitted that 10 of his 17 men had left the job yesterday morning, but added that he would be back today with 30 workers.

Meantime, the cases of seven men involved in a picket-line fight at Fairlington last Saturday were continued yesterday in Fairfax Trial Justice Court.

All are charged with assault. Trial Justice Harry L. Carrico postponed the hearings because one defendant had not recovered sufficiently from a jaw fracture to appear. In all, a total of 19 separate warrants were sworn out in connection with the seven arrests.

Two Police, Ambulance Driver, Help Stork to Deliver Baby

MRS. CATHERINE MANYETTE AND NEW DAUGHTER
The "stork" raced the doctors with her seventh child

Two policemen and an ambulance driver teamed up to deliver a baby girl yesterday—to a mother who wanted a boy.

When Police Pvts. Ralph G. McGuffin and William A. Dize responded to a call from 48 I st. nw., they found Mrs. Catherine Manyette, 36, in labor. She told the officers:

The policemen saw Mrs. Manyette was an experienced patient when she described her condition accurately.

As the policemen prepared for emergency action, the Health Department ambulance arrived, bringing the assistance of Driver Harold Laster.

The three men delivered an 8-pound girl, and then sent mother and daughter off to Gallinger Hospital, where both were reported doing nicely last night.

Paul Manyette, the baby's father, a mechanic, was at work at the time. Told the news, he said:

"Now we have six girls and only one boy. That's why we were hoping it would be a boy."

Manyette said they hadn't a name for the baby.

"We had a boy's name picked out, so now the older children will have to start all over again. They pick the names for the newcomers," he said.

3 Brothers Brave Gun, Seize Thief

Owners of Liquor Store and Youth Disarm Robber, Save $800 Cash

Three brothers risked their lives last night to foil an armed robber's attempt to hold up a liquor store owned by two of them.

Six successful robberies, 11 burglaries and 5 grand larcenies were reported to police yesterday.

The brothers, Harry Kramer, 25 and Sidney, 22, owners of the Uptown Liquor Store, 4213 Connecticut ave. nw., and Alvin, 18, who was helping in the shop, ganged up on a robber who attempted to rifle their cash register after purchasing a pint of wine about 8 p. m.

Gang Up on Robber

While Sidney Kramer was getting the wine from a shelf, the holdup man pulled a .32-caliber revolver, and told the brothers to lie behind the counter, Harry Kramer said. As he was lowering himself to the floor, Sidney pulled the electric cord from the register socket, Harry told police.

Unable to get into the register, which contained $800, the robber demanded that the brothers open it. Sidney rushed him while getting to his feet, and Harry and Alvin joined him in a leap on the intruder, who had started for the door at the first sign of resistance.

Filling Station Looted

Bandits forced a filling station manager to lie on the floor while the cash register was looted. The victim, Shirley C. Hall, 3322 Brothers pl. se., night manager at Jimmie's Amoco gas station, 2900 Nichols ave. se., reported that two men took $112.11 from the cash register and escaped in a black taxicab parked outside.

Ernest Reeves Kontner, 2548 University pl. nw., reported that a $900 diamond ring and two $400 diamond rings were stolen from a shelf in the kitchen.

Thieves made off with an oil burner from the yard of 918 1st st. nw., hauling it away in a pushcart.

Thieves removed the iron grating from a window of the Washington Supply Co., 500 K st. nw., and took whisky valued at $180.

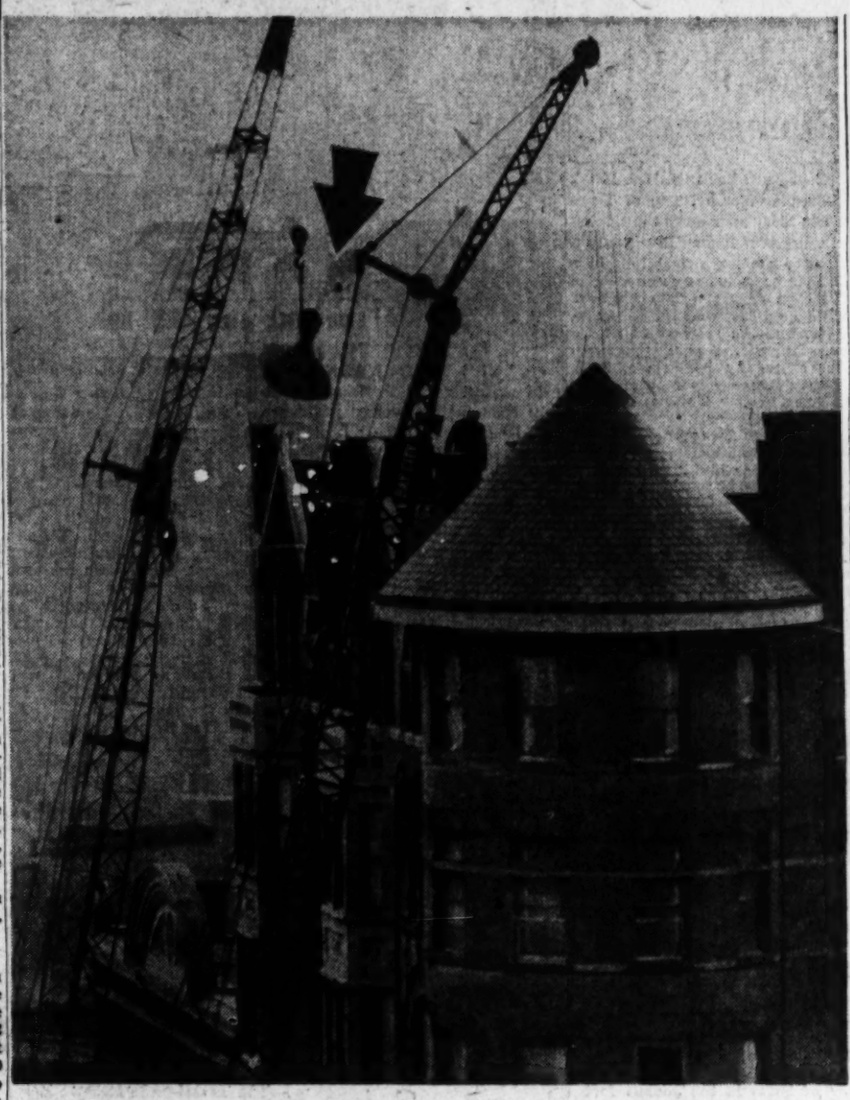
The names of victims, their addresses and the amounts taken in other cases included the following:

Marvin R. Emerson, architect, 2000 F st. ne., $103 in merchandise from his automobile in front of 1248 4th st. ne.

Philip R. Anderson, Naval Hospital, Bethesda, $118 in merchandise taken from his automobile on 15th st. nw., between V and W sts. nw.

Clarence J. Bush, of Livingston, Illinois, $380 in camera equipment taken from his automobile in front of 1217 Vermont ave. nw.

Group Named for Empire Probe; New Wreckers Undertake Job



The Washington Post

UNCAPPED—Workmen begin demolishing the wrecked Empire apartment-hotel, 9th and New York ave. nw., yesterday. Taking the building apart piece by piece, the first thing to come down is the cap on the spiral roof

Gen. Young Appoints Committee Headed By Robert H. Davis, Building Inspector

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Why did the Empire Building partly collapse Tuesday night?

The answer was still being sought yesterday as a wrecking crew opened operations for clearing the debris. This huge pile of wreckage may hold the answer, Brig. Gen. Gordon H. Young, Engineer Commissioner, indicated yesterday.

To investigate the cause of the disaster, General Young appointed a special committee. Building Inspector Robert H. Davis will head the group. A representative of the corporation counsel's office will also participate.

The three other members will be Stewart Beall, an official of Beall & LeMay Co., engineers, of 1726 M st. nw.; W. B. Clemmer, builder, of Riverdale, Md., and A. Hamilton Wilson, architect, of 1022 20th st. nw.

The committee will organize Monday at 10:30 a. m. at a meeting in the District Building.

Meanwhile, James W. Congwer, consulting engineer retained by the building owner, and R. D. Kinney of the buildig inspector's office will probe the debris being removed from the building for leads on the cause.

Original Plans Destroyed

Since original plans for the 1893 building have been destroyed, officials will attempt to reconstruct the building on paper, floor by floor, as the debris is emptied from the structure.

General Young said the collapsed section looked as if a "very heavy airborne bomb fell through the center of the building without exploding." Others who saw the interior said it was shayed like a "V" with floors slanting downward toward a mountain of debris.

This pointed to some "structural failure," District officials agreed.

Inspection of the standing exterior brick wall and the basement indicate the failure was not there, Chief Building Inspector Robert H. Davis declared. Other construction men who have visited the scene point the finger iinstead at recent renovations.

David Solomon, District contractor, who investigated several collapses during his 20 years as a contractor in New York City, declared bluntly, "there must be a cause. The building would not collapse merely from old age. Something must have been done within the last year that caused the disaster."

Care Increases With Age

Solomon, who was a construction adviser for the Allied Commission in Italy during World War II, explained that the older a building is, the more care must be taken in making alterations. He likened a structure to an old person who cannot withstand shocks as easily as a younger person.

The Building Inspector's office has a record only of two renovations. The first was in 1928 when a nin-inch brick wall, listed as "non-bearing" was removed to enlarge floor space on the street level.

George L. Goodacre, who operated Goodacre's Restaurant on the site for a quarter century, said he remembered such a wall being removed when the eating place was expanded to include the store next door.

The District record did not indicate from which floor or what part of the building the wall was removed.

The next alteration recorded was one made this year by Nick Papanicolas, present owner of the Empire Building, involving a storefront "face-lifting." New fronts were placed on the street level stores, replacing older fronts, and a new concrete floor was laid for th City Finance Co. office on the corner. This floor was the ceiling of the basement boiler room.

No Structural Changes Made

The work was done by the M. Cladny Construction Co. The firm's head, Morris Cladny, who has been in the business 26 years, emphasized that no structural changes were made, that no wall or part of a wall was removed.

The only alterations made in addition to the exterior refurbishing and building a new floor was the replastering of interior walls and placing a new plaster ceiling below the existing one, Cladny said. He said the plastering did not weaken any existing walls.

The inspector on the job, Oscar Estep, said he had made about 15 inspections from April to September when the work was under way and that "nothing was done which would weaken the structure."

The last general inspection of the building was made in November, 1944, by William P. Carr and no defects were noted.

In September, Wilbur Dorsey, whose brother Ernest is missing in the collapse, said on a visit to the latter's apartment, he had noticed that the floor had "sunk about 2 inches."

Owner Assumes Responsibility for Clearing the Debris

The Pines Wrecking Co. of Arlington today will take over the job of clearing wreckage left by collapse of the Empire Building, 9th st. and New York ave. nw.

Representatives of the Arrow Wrecking & Lumber Co. began demolition work yesterday under District government authorization. They removed roof tin and some cornice pieces.

The project was turned over to the Arlington firm last night after Nick Papanicolas, the owner, agreed to assume responsibility for clearing the debris.

Ernest Dorsey, 44, who lived in apartment 21.

Mrs. K. B. Van Sickler, 79, who lived in apartment 32.

Joseph Smith, who lived in apartment 52 and whose wife was critically injured.

Relatives of the missing persons watched as the Arrow Wrecking & Lumber Co. began moving cranes into place shortly after noon preparatory to removing the roof.

Among them were four children of Mrs. Van Sickler, including William Van Sickler, who was accompanied by his wife from Accokeek, Md.; Giles Van Sickler from Fitzgerald, Ga., and Mrs. L. B. Phillips of Round Hill, Va., and Mrs. W. B. Edwards of Boyds, Md., both daughters of the missing woman.

The Washington Post

FLOOR, PLEASE?—A workman is lifted by crane above the Empire building to guide another crane in the work of removing the cap from the apartment-hotel's roof (top)

William Van Sickler said he and his wife had tried to contact an attorney "and see what can be done." He said he had tried to enter the ruins himself to search for his mother, but was stopped by police and firemen.

"My mother may have been lying in there all this time and may have died from exposure," he told a reporter. "It certainly seems to me that someone could have got in. Even if it wasn't safe for firemen to go in, I don't see why the wrecking company couldn't have got in there."

Wrecker to Shore Roof

Murray T. Shipp, president of the Pines Wrecking Co., said his first task will be to "make the building safe for workers."

Initial step, he said, will be to place a huge beam under the roof to prevent its collapse. "We won't take the roof off at the present time," he stated.

Shipp said he "guessed" it would take "three or four" days to install the beam and shore up other parts of the building before workmen could begin actual removal of debris. It's not a wrecking job but an engineers' and riggers' job," he declared.

2-Alarm Fire Damages S. E. Warehouse

An hour-long blaze in a storage warehouse of R. Robinson, Inc., building materials company at 2301 Pennsylvania ave. se. early last night caused an estimated $20,000 to $30,000 damage.

Fourteen pieces of apparatus responded to the two-alarm fire, which broke out shortly after 6 p. m.

The fire was confined to the 1½-story frame warehouse. Adjoining offices and a hardware store were not damaged.

The fire broke out close to the ceiling on a balcony in the rear of the 30-by-120-foot structure. It was discovered by Thomas E. Alderton, 7540 Allentown rd. se., an employe, as he was locking up for the night.

Alderton said he saw the flames through the window of the adjoining hardware store. He notified Miss Beverly Chrisman, cashier-telephone operator, who called the fire department.

Principal damage was to the tar roof of the shed. The walls remained standing, but stocks of feed, poultry brooders, Christmas toys and building materials were damaged by fire and water.

Joseph H. Deckman, president of the company, who estimated the damage, said that the fire may have been caused by defective wiring. He theorized that rats might have eaten through the insulation. He said lights in the building had gone out shortly before the outbreak of the blaze.

Heavy eastbound traffic was rerouted around Barney cir. and not permitted to cross Sousa Bridge during the blaze which broke out during the height of the home bound commuting rush.

The same building was gutted by fire in October, 1944, Deckman said, causing $50,000 damage.

Horse's Kick Injured Her, Child Says

Patricia Ann Crouch, 7, found unconscious near her Michellville, Md., home Wednesday, recovered consciousness long enough late yesterday to say she had been kicked in the head by a horse.

"Mama, the big black horse did it," she was quoted as telling her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Crouch, who have maintained a bedside vigil since she underwent a delicate brain operation late Wednesday.

Dr. James P. Murphy, who performed the operation, said reports that he had been requested to make tests to determine if the child had been criminally attacked were "entirely unfounded."

Prince Georges County General Hospital authorities said last night that though her condition is still critical she showed slight improvement.

Mail Box Theft Holds D. C. Woman

Treasury agent sand Postoffice investigators solved a mail theft case yesterday—the hard way.

Florence E. Jackson, 37, of 1430 W st. nw., was held in $2000 bond by Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon for action of the grand jury. She was charged with theft from mail boxes at that address.

Indorsements on the stolen checks furnished the only tangible clew for the agents assigned to the case. Beginning with the tenants living in the front part of the first floor of the apartment house, the investigators patiently worked their way through the building.

In the last apartment checked, at the rear of the top floor, they arrested their suspect.

Secret Service agents also announced that Clarence Bell, 53, of 4331 Douglas st. ne., had been taken into custody and charged with forging indorsement of 12 Government checks totaling $800.

Bell was held in $1000 bond by Municipal Judge Armond Scott for action of the grand jury.

Investigators said that he admitted stealing and cashing checks intended as insurance refunds for wounded soldiers. The suspect was employed in the Adjutant General's office during 1945 and 1946. His arrest followed a painstaking check of handwriting specimens of 200 employes and former employes of the office.

Md. Welfare Body Challenges Report On Its Efficiency

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP).—Maryland members of the American Association of Social Workers today challenged a report by the commission on governmental efficiency and economy which was critical of the Baltimore Welfare Department and asked the names and qualifications of those who made the study.

The efficiency and economy commission's 25,000 word report issued 10 days ago said the welfare department was full of mismanagement and waste. It placed the blame principally on "sincere but impractical social workers."

The social workers' challenge today was contained in a letter prepared by a special committee headed by Miss Amy Green of the Social Work Division of Johns Hopkins Hospital and sent to the efficiency and economy commission, which is an independent group of businessmen and civil leaders.

Woman Accused Of Strangling Baby Goes on Trial

Trial of Miss Ruth Hottel, 32, of 5528 Wisconsin ave. nw., accused of strangling her new born child at the Chevy Chase Club February 6, opened yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court.

Police testified that the infant was found dead in a box after the former switchboard operator at the club had beent aken to the hospital. A maid at the club, Cora Banks of 1806 Benning rd. ne., testified that Miss Hottel had asked her to put the box in the trash.

Dr. Frank J. Broscart, Montgomery coroner, testified that the child had breathed, while Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy coroner in Washington, said evidence didn't show whether the child had breathed after or before birth. The trial was adjourned until Monday for final arguments.

D. C. Trio May Escape Penalty In Unauthorized Plane Flight

Three District youths, arrested following an unauthorized midnight plane flight from Groome, Md., December 3, may escape prosecution by Prince Georges County authorities.

This was indicated in Upper Marlboro Police Court yesterday when one of the trio was freed on a charge of unauthorized use of an airplane after State's Attorney Hervey Machen, jr., admitted that the charge on which he had been held was not supported by Maryland statute.

Hearings for the other two, both juveniles, were postponed until Friday when one of the defendants failed to apear for a scheduled hearing in Upper Marlboro Juvenile Court. After granting a week's delay, the court ordered his $500 bond forfeited if he fails to appear for the next hearing.

Uncertainty of the State's power to prosecute was expressed after Charls G. Hack, 18, 513 Newcombe st. se., was freed by Police Court Judge Alan Bowie when Machen agreed with a defense contention that "there was no such charge as unauthorized use of an airplane."

Maryland law which provides penalties for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle could not be applied to an airplane, Machen said, adding that he could find no statute applicable to the particular offense.

He said the youths could not be tried for larceny, inasmuch as the plane in which they made their midnight hop was returned intact, and there was no action which would tend to "deprive the owner of his rightful property."

Machen said the two juveniles might be treated differently, inasmuch as they were facing hearings in the Juvenile Court where they subject to general charges of juvenile delinquency, based on the airplane incident. Court officials, however, expressed doubt that they would be penalized after one member of their group already had been freed.

Meanwhile, one of the boys, 15, was fined a total of $110 yesterday on traffic charges arising from an 80-mile-an-hour auto chase which ensued when they left the airport after the flight. Listed as the driver of the car in which the trio fled, he was convicted on charges of speeding in excess of 70 miles an hour and driving without an operator's permit.

State Committee To Decide Dispute Of Va. Democrats

Covington, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—The State central committee will be called upon to decide which of two committees named at a split mass meeting Thursday night has the right to call itself the Alleghany County Democratic Committee.

The action was ageed upon in the wake of what started out as a democratic meeting at the courthouse and wound up with a group representing the party's "old guard" taking a walk and holding its own meeting in the courthouse basement. The larger group, including the CIO-PAC element, remained in the courtroom and elected its own committee.

Those remaining adopted a resolution that A. J. Tingler, party secretary, be required to leave the records and property of the Democratic Party in the courtroom.

But by the time the heads were counted and the resolution declared abopted Secretary Tingler had departed.

He was in the basement, his records with him, serving as secretary to the group which walked out.

Timmons Gets Lumpkins Post

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed Francis L. Timmons, jr., to the post of chief clerk of the District Engineering Department at $5902 a year.

Timmons

Timmons, who was promoted from a $4525-a-year job as special assistant to Engineering Commissioner Gordon R. Young, succeeds Porter M. Lumpkins, who died Tuesday.

A native of Washington, Timmons expressed his appreciation to the Board of Commissioners, and said that he thought his new post would prove to be "an interesting fulltime assignment."

Timmons, a graduate of Eastern High School in 1925, lives at 3210 Wheeler rd. se. with his wife, Pauline, and their 2½-year-old daughter, Patricia Anne.

Shortly after graduation, Timmons was made secretary to the District engineer in charge of sewage, a post he held for five years. In 1930 he was made secretary and assistant to J. B. Gordon, director of Sanitary Engineering.

Eight years later, Timmons was made chief clerk in the Trees and Parking Division, and held that job until 1940 when he was appointed as secretary to Engineering Commissioner David McCoach.

Timmons was made administrative assistant to the Board of Commissioners in 1943, and was assigned to Gen. C. W. Kutz, engineering commissioner at that time.

Within a year, Timmons was in the Army, where he stayed for two years. He was a sergeant in the Corps of Engineers, and upon dis-

Tito Signs Pact With Romania

Bucharest, Romania, Dec. 19 (AP).—Premier Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia today announced the signing of a Yugoslav-Romanian mutual assistance pact, the final link in a five-power Danubian defense chain.

Eleven days ago Tito signed a mutual aid pact with Hungary, and last month he reached an accord with Bulgaria. A similar pact also was signed by Bulgaria and Albania. Hungary is reported considering similar treaties with Romania and Bulgaria.

Addressing 300,000 persons who waited several hours in a snowstorm to hear him, Tito said the pact had created "a front of peace, a front of peaceful development, a front against the warmongers and a front for a better future."

Gheorghie-Gheorghiu-Dej, Romania's Communist minister of trade and industry, said the treaty would contribute to the consolidation of "the democratic and anti-imperialistic front."

10 Arabs Die In Jews' Raid On 'Invaders'

Jerusalem, Dec. 19 (AP).—Jewish fighters, launching what Jewish sources described as the first blow to counter the Arab "invasion" of Palestine, killed 10 Arabs and wounded 5 today in an attack on the border village of Khisas.

Subsequently the Palestine government clamped a highway curfew on this upper Galilee area, prohibiting the movement of Jewish vehicles for 36 hours.

Shortly after the toll in the Khisas attack had been counted the Arabs struck back by raking a convoy of buses in the Judean foothills with automatic weapon fire. One Jew was killed and three others were wounded in this attack near Latroun.

A freight train was halted and stripped of some of its cargo by 100 armed Arabs.

The importance of the typewriter in the struggle between the Jews and Arabs was highlighted when a business training school in Tel Aviv was held up by a group of Jews. As the men walked out with 12 of the machines, one of them said: "We need these for political purposes."

Fourteen persons were killed during the day, bringing to 280 the number of deaths in the Holy Land since the United Nations voted for partition on November 29. The toll throughout the Middle East exceeded 400.

Jewish informants said warriors of Hagana shot up Kihsas to halt "infiltration" by members of the volunteer army commanded by Fawzi Bel al Kaukji.

An official account said police found that five of the dead Arabs were children.

An agent for Hagana said: "Our men will apologize to the villagers for the killing of women and children, but we must tell them also that they subject themselves to such dangers by harboring Arab desperadoes."

The attacking force sped into the town in two automobiles and began hurling bombs. The casualties were found in the wreckage of two houses destroyed during the fighting.

Arab preparations for the anti-partition fight were pushed in the Holy Land itself and elsewhere in the Middle East. The Syrian Defense Ministry announced in Damascus that it had accepted the resignations of some army officers who wished to volunteer to fight Zionists in Palestine.

A representative of companies interested in the pipeline to run from American oil concessions in Saudi Arabia to the Mediterranean said in Cairo that work had been suspended on the western end of the project because of unrest in the Middle East.

The Premiers of seven Arab states began the return trips to their capitals after attending the Arab League meeting in Cairo. They had decided "to indulge in the battle imposed upon them" by partition and to continue the struggle to a victorious conclusion.

800 Veterans May Be Forced to End Studies

The Washington Post

GET THE WELL-KNOWN "WORD"—Former GI students of Solumbia Tech learn that in 10 days their Government-financed education will end because the school has not signed a new contract with the Veterans Administration. Wendell B. Ealy addresses fellow students at yesterday's mass meeting

Eight hundred veterans may be forced to end studies under the GI Bill of Rights at Columbia Technical Institute, 1239 Vermont ave. nw., because of Government contract difficulties.

The present contract, under which the Veterans Administration authorizes Government payment of tuition for veteran students at the school, expires December 27.

Crux of the deadlock over a new contract is the school's refusal to submit a financial statement, itemizing costs.

According to Joseph F. Dicaro, chief of training facilities of the VA regional office, the Government is authorized by law to pay for former servicemen's tuition only at schools whose rates yield 10 per cent or less profit.

The law, Dicaro said, requires schools to submit financial statements before a contract may be granted. He said Columbia submitted such a statement when the present contract was negotiated. School Director H. G. Malcolm, said he "could not recall" if the school had.

After a deadlock conference yesterday of Columbia and local VA officials, attended by veteran student representatives, Malcolm told a reporter:

"This isn't Russia yet. We will not submit the financial statement they ask for because we refuse to have anyone tell us how much money we can or cannot make."

A VA spokesman at the conference reported the agency is "very liberal" about the 10 per cent profit limit since "most schools" with veteran students are "making far in excess" of that figure.

Subsidiary issues, discussed at the conference were:

VA's limitation of a school's administrative expenses to 5 per cent of specified operating costs. VA representatives pointed out the law allows a school more if it can prove higher administrative expenses.

Backlog in payment to the school of monthly tuition vouchers. VA spokesmen pointed out some 200 schools in the Washington area submit vouchers at the same time, involving tremendous bookeeping work. While some $16,000 is still outstanding as due the school, $217,492.36 has already been paid to Columbia since January by VA, records showed.

Some 75 veteran students held an impromptu mass discussion of the issues after the conference.

Columbia, which gives courses in engineering drafting, radio, building construction and commercial art, currently has 450 veteran day students taking an average of 25 hours of classes per work at a monthly tuition fee of $36, Malcolm said.

Tuition for some 350 night students who average six to eight hours of classes is $16 to $18 monthly, Malcolm said.

Should the school fail to make a new contract with VA these former servicemen could continue by paying their own tuition, and lose subsistence payments, or by transferring to anothe rschool.

Columbia, founded 36 years ago, now has 300 non-veteran students and could continue to operate without veterans, Malcolm said.

Many of the veterans attending Columbia come from States as far away as Florida and Kansas. A number are married and have children. About 80 were disabled in the war.

The school is owned by P. J. Leverone of Miami, Fla.

Browne School P-TA to Meet On Boycott

The meeting, called at the request of the P-TA, will be held at 4:30 p. m. at the Franklin Administration Building, 13th K sts. nw.

Ban on Reich Plants Going To Reds Beaten

By The Associated Press

The Senate struck from a foreign aid money bill yesterday a prohibition against further dismantling of German industrial plants and their shipment to Russia.

Action came on voice vote after Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the Foreign Relations Committee said that while he favors halting such consignments to Russia, the Senate's action would have had the effect of repudiating an American agreement at the Paris Conference at which friendly European nations were promised German reparations.

The provision had been written into an omnibus money bill calling for $1,091,246,500, including emergency help for foreign nations.

Situation Under Discussion

Vandenberg said during heated debate on the provision concerning German plants that the State Department now is consulting with Great Britain about the possibility of stopping such plant shipments to Russia and its satellites.

The State Department later confirmed Vandenberg's statement, saying it is "seeking adequate arrangements with the British with regard to any further shipment of dismantled (German) plants to the east."

A brief statement said Secretary of State Marshall had a preliminary talk on the subject with British Foreign Minister Bevin Thursday before leaving London, where he attended the fruitless Big Four Foreign Ministers conference.

Amendment Withdrawn

Chairman Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Appropriations Committee finally agreed to withdraw the hotly disputed amendment after receiving assurance from Vandenberg that the Foreign Relations Committee will explore the whole matter of plant dismantling when Congress returns next month.

Previously the Senate Appropriations Committee had inserted in the measure a bar against use of any of 490 million dollars in occupation funds for payment of American personnel engaged in plant dismantling.

Bridges had said he would favor blowing up German plants rather than permit them to be dismantled and fall into Russia's hands.

"I am not so damn stupid that I want to send them to Russia," Bridges shouted in the Senate. "I'd blow them up instead."

Winchester Chest Lags By $12,000

Winchester, Va., Dec. 19.—Community Chest officials have indicated that a house-to-house canvass may be necessary in order to meet the 1948 goal of $34,000. So far they said, the Chest is about $12,000 short.

Chester A. and Charles Lee Orndorff, Frederick County, have been released on bond pending action of a Federal grand jury on charges they operated an illegal distillery. The two were arrested last week when ABC and Alcohol Tax Unit investigators found and destroyed a 35 gallon still.

Movement of fruit from Winchester cold storages has been slow, according to local dealers. The said the holiday season has resulted in little noticeable increase in shipments. Local plants report approximately 557,000 bushels of apples in storage, and say that rail car shipment is "very light." They expect sales to pick up early next year, when the supply of competing northwest apples has been exhausted.

Additions and alterations to historic Christ Episcopal Church here are nearing completion. Funds were the gift of Frank N. Hack, member of the parish. Improvements will be dedicated in memory of the Rev. Robert B. Nelson, rector of the church from 1921 to 1946.

Evatt Urges German Peace Drawn by U. N.

Sydney, Dec. 19 (AP).—Herbert V. Evatt, Australian Minister of External Affairs, called today for the settlement of the snarled German question by the democratic methods of the United Nations General Assembly.

Declaring "power politics" was responsible for the breakdown of the Big Four Foreign Ministers Conference in London, Evatt said the way now may be cleared "for negotiation of a just peace on democratic lines."

Failure of the four major powers to write a German peace settlement and to solve problems of reparations and economic principles for Germany "was serious but was not an irreparable setback," Evatt said at a luncheon of the United Nations association.

Evatt said a conference of "all countries that participated in the victory at such great sacrifice" should be held without voting restrictions. This was an obvious reference to the veto power of the five permanent members of the United States Security Council.

He attacked the "exclusiveness and narrowness" of the Big Four discussion and said: "I am not criticizing or defending any one country. My faith is that the United Nations Assembly will succeed in keeping peace, and the major powers should follow the broad democratic outlook of the Assembly—for in the multitude of the Assembly there is safety."

U. N. Council Raises Veto Issue Again

Lake Success, Dec. 19 (AP).—The Security Council decided today to discuss the controversial veto issue again despite Russian objections that all such talk "constitutes a waste of time."

By a vote of 9 to 2, with Russia and Poland in the minority, the Council approved a work sheet calling for debate. No date was set.

The point arose when the Council was asked to agree on a discussion program which listed a letter from Secretary-General Trygve Lie calling attention to a resolution of the U. N. Assembly sending the veto question to the "Little Assembly," January 5.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, who has cast 21 of Russia's 22 vetoes in the Council, promptly declared that everyone knows Russia is against any change in the veto arrangement, and that the Soviet government felt the question of the veto "does not exist."

The delegates spent most of their 3½-hour session debating the Indonesian question.

L. N. Palar, Indonesian representative, charged that the Netherlands had violated a council "cease" fire" order by occupying the island of Madura. He charged the Dutch with committing "atrocities." The Dutch representative, Jonkheer J. W. M. Snouck Hurgronje, replied briefly that his government had "categorically denied" the accusations.

Norman Littells Give Cocktail Party

MR. AND MRS. NORMAN LITTELL'S cocktail party yesterday at their home in Arlington, Va., was an epilogue to the House committee hearings on un-American activities in which Mr. Littell was counselor of Sumner Welles and George Messersmith who faced a quiz in the Hans Eisler incident.

When he had cleared his clients and the final session was over, someone of the newsmen remarked: "Well, that calls for a drink." "It does and I'm good for it," spoke up Mr. Littell. But as it was during working hours no one could accept and it was promptly forgotten by every one but Mr. Littell. Yesterday he invited those men—and women—who had covered the story, with their husbands and wives, along with a few others out to his house for a pre-Christmas celebration.

Among those there were Dr. A. H. Phillipse, Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy and Mme. Phillipse; Dr. L. R. W. Soutendijk, Financial Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy and Mme. Soutendijk; Lady Garthwaite, here for a short visit on her way from England to Bermuda; Dr. Vernon Imhoff, American correspondent for the Zurich Zeitung; the Attache of the Austrian Legation and Mme. Thalberg.

Then, Miss Ruth Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. William S. White, Miss Mary Spargo, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Knighton, Mr. and Mrs. John Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Pilat, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wilcove, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Arbogast, Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Klein, Mr. and Mrs. Dean W. Dittmer, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Demma, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Le May, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Shaffer, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Severeid, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Shadel, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elson, Mr. and Mrs. V. I. Bischke.

General and Mrs. Adams Entertain at Cocktails

GEN. and Mrs. Clayton Adams who are staying with Mrs. Adams' aunt, Mrs. Martin Vogel, until they get their own house, entertained at cocktails on Thursday for a group of some 60 or more of their friends.

For the first time, Mrs. Vogel, who was constantly entertaining for wounded GI's during the war, was a guest in her own home and thoroughly enjoying it.

Also enjoying this lively party were Mr. and Mrs. U. A. Senabria visitors here for a brief stay, who left yesterday to return to Chicago.

Smartest costume in the gathering was on the hostess herself, who had ordered it from Paris. Of Gibson girl inspiration it was fashioned of rustling black taffeta with a shirtwaist top striped in bands of sapphire blue velvet ribbon to form a yoke.

Secretary of the Interior, Julius Krug, was there with Mrs. Krug in severe black with a soaring aigrette on her turban. Mrs. William Knowland and her daughter, Emelyn who's a student at the University of California, had just landed by plane from the coast. Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, in becoming brown, was admiring Mrs. Vogel's tapestries in the paneled drawing room, and others there were Mrs. Sydney Graves, without her husband, who is ill; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, the George Abells and Mrs. John Steelman, lovely in black with blue roses spilling from her hat.

Pete Vogel was up from Warrenton for his cousin's party, and here and there were Miss Bertha Joseph with her own "new look" —a veil on her hat and ruffles on her dress. Mrs. Claude Beddington, Burks Summers without his Mrs.; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Asnberry, Mrs. Adolph Buquor, Capt. William H. Watson and Mrs. Watson in black with accents of pink; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Witt and Col. and Mrs. Harold Ambrose.

Hoover, whose engagement to Lieut. Col. James F. Mears was recently announced.

The guests numbered 50 and included a number of this season's debutantes. Miss Wadden will entertain another group of her friends soon at a bridge tea in honor of Mrs. Robert Brashear, who was Miss Grace Claggett Roberts until her recent marriage, and for Miss Nina Lunn who will be married to Nat Luttrell on January 8.

Smeby's Cocktail Party . . To Mark Anniversary

Between dances, Miss Morgan dined with members of her family, including her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Brant Edward Roberts of Baltimore, and her grandmother, Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Pyle, also of Baltimore. A house guest, Gilbert Livingston Stewart, jr., went on to the Assembly Ball with the debutante and her parents.

Suits to Suit Milady's Tastes

THE swirl and the straight skirt vie for importance in the advance spring suit styles. Both are "fashion right" and your choice should be made on the basis of which is the more becoming to you

TAILORED offering for spring is this three-piece outfit with pencil-slim skirt, long jacket and three-quarter length top coat, made of brown and white check, hard-finished wool. This was one of the costumes shown last night at the fashion show and dance given by the Kentucky State Society in the main ballroom at the Shoreham Hotel. Suit is from the Clothes Horse. Hat, of gold felt with pheasant feather trim, is by Mme. Chautemps.

Teaching Child How to Climb And Use Hands Prevents Falls

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There is a tendency of parents to deny the child all experience in living, if there is the least element of danger in it. This is right, if within limits. It is nothing short of criminal to leave small children in a house alone; it is criminally careless to put upon a child under 4 the responsibility for crossing a street safely. The mother has to know her child and his capacities and stand guard so long as he is unable to do it for himself. In the home it is far more desirable to keep a roaming, investigative child in a room with a gate or in a playpen, than to punish him brutally for getting into danger.

But, the purpose of this argument is to convince the parent that there are small dangers which the child must take in his stride. They are educational and necessary. A child will climb up on davenports and chairs. He will long to go up and down stairs. When he is able to do these things he should be allowed the privilege. The mother may need to stand right behind him to ease any falls, but he needs the practice and he'll get it surreptitiously, and more dangerously, than if he is given permission to climb and then is watched. The mother of a 3-year-old may have her heart in her mouth as her adventuresome child scrambles all over a jungle gym, but the child will be getting wholesome exercise and skill in the proper way.

Children should be introduced early to various types of athletic apparatus. A few bumps or skinned knees are preferable to being denied these thrilling adventures.

As soon as a child is able to perform an act mischievously he should be taught how to do it safely. The child who can scratch a match and toss it away hurriedly, for fear his mother will discover him, is ready to learn how to treat a match after it has been lighted. He is already past the time when matches can be put on the highest shelf. He is ready to be a user instead of an observer.

Put such a child on the floor with a large box of matches and stand right there while he lights each one, burns it to the end and discards it. He will learn how to treat a match safely and have had enough of match-lighting to take all the thrill from it.

The household is full of mechanized equipment whose use is accompanied by danger. When the child is small see that he is safely away from it, in a room or a chair or a pen where he cannot handle it. When he is 5 or older begin to show him how to use it safely. The dangers of any other course far outweigh this one of calm education in how to act instead of depending upon methods to prevent the child from acting. He has a thousand ways of outwitting such frustration of his curiosity.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

I wonder if the "baking powder biscuit made with a starter" that L. M. A. asked about in a recent "Ask Anne" column is the "sourdough" biscuit made out West. In Texas, where I come from, herders on the range often keep the starter for these biscuits going for weeks at a time. Delicious sourdough biscuit are sometimes served in small town restaurants, too.

I have two recipes for these biscuits are sometimes served in powder; one doesn't. The first, which was printed in breezy Western style in a Texas newspaper, is as follows:

"Start by dissolving 1 yeast cake in 2 cups of warm water. Add flour to make consistency of buttermilk. When ready to make biscuit, mix enough of this with flour to make the amount of dough you want. Give it a shot of baking powder and a pinch of soda. Add shortening and salt about as you would for regular biscuit. Let mixture rise a little. Get a pan hot and melt grease in it. Dip both sides of the biscuit in the grease. Let them rise a little while and bake."

The second recipe is more exact: "Make sourdough with 1 cake dry yeast and 1 pint of warm water, to which is added 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Add flour to make thick as buttermilk. Let stand 24 hours in warm place. To make sourdough biscuit, add enough of this sourdough mixture to 1 cup flour to form a workable dough. Add also 1 pinch salt, 1 pinch soda and 1 tablespoon lard. Let rise 30 minutes and bake in Dutch oven."

I have made the sourdough batter and kept it in the ice box for several days. I find the second batch of biscuits made with it is usually the best. After that, the dough begins to "go bad." However, as I said before, some people keep it on hand for weeks even months, adding fresh flour and water all the time to keep the "starter" going.

GETTING the family's fine glassware ready for holiday festivities? Here are a few points to remember: For minimum scratching and maximum luster, wash glasses in hot but not boiling water, with a cloth in the bottom of the dishpan. Add a small amount of ammonia or liquid or powdered detergent to the water. Rinse glasses in clear water the same temperature as the wash water. Drain on a rubber-covered dish rack or a Turkish towel. Glass will air dry to a high polish when washed with ammonia or soapless detergent, but must be dried with lintless cloth if soap is used

A few weeks ago you recommended the use of gum arabic for stiffening limp rayon curtains. I have forgotten the proportions and would like to have you repeat them. M. H.

Add 1 pint boiling water to 1 ounce powdered gum arabic. Stir over low heat until gum arabic is completely dissolved. Dilute with 2 to 3½ quarts lukewarm water, according to stiffness desired. Dry garment quickly after dipping.

We soon will move into a house which has cement floors. Because it will be a temporary abode, we would like, if possible, to avoid the expense of carpeting. We've thought of painting them. Is this advisable? What paint should we use? K. E. P.

The most satisfactory way to finish concrete floors is to use a special paint made specifically for cement. Such a paint can be purchased in a variety of colors in almost any hardware or paint shop.

Many thanks to E. C. R., K. F. and A. G. M., for sending in information about Haviland china in the Apple Blossom pattern. This has been forwarded to A. M. H., who asked the question about where to obtain it.

A year ago, I bought a pair of sconces which were supposed to be antique brass. They are beginning to tarnish and I want your advise as to what to use on them. A regular brass polish means continual polishing. G. P. S.

A good way to clean antique brass is to rub with lemon oil or with furniture polish. The excess oil or polish should then be removed with a soft dry cloth.

If you want to avoid the necessity of frequent polishing, why not lacquer the sconces? Procedure is as follows: After cleaning the sconces, wash with hot soapy water to remove all polish. Rinse thoroughly with hot clear water. Avoid excess handling. Dry thoroughly. Apply denatured alcohol (poison) to entire surface and let dry. Apply clear lacquer with a paint brush or spray to entire surface. Any time you want to remove this lacquer coat and put on a fresh one, you can take it off with denatured alcohol.

The other day in your column, G. H. M. asked about red and yellow African violets. No nurseryman, to my knowledge, has yet seen a yellow or cherry red violet in bloom, though they have been reported. Violets of a maroon or plum shade are sold under the name "Red Head" and "Bi-Color" by at least two firms, addresses of which are enclosed.

Also, here's a suggestion that may be helpful to some reader: Iodine stains can be neutralized with ammonia. I have used this method successfully on towels and bathmats. E. D. D.

Addresses of the nursery firms have been forwarded to G. H. M., as has information on the same subject provided by L. M. S. and N. J. Thanks to all of you.

I have a beautiful gold lame evening dress which I prize highly. The material is now beginning to tarnish and take on a blackened appearance. Is there anything I can do to keep it from tarnishing? Mc Mc.F.

There is nothing you can do which can be guaranteed to prevent your dress from tarnishing. However, if you will wrap it in black tissue paper and store it in a tight box so that it is not exposed to air, it might help. Also, placing a piece of block camphor into the box with the dress might retard further tarnishing.

Children Write to Christ Child For Christmas Food and Clothes

By Ruth Allison Hudnut

Sixteen hundred letters to the Christ Child have been received by the Christ Child Society from children all over Washington, and these letters reveal a pathetic story of want and insecurity in our midst. They show, too, an abiding faith in the miracles the Christ Child can perform.

One small boy asked for a Cadillac car for his mother and a refrigerator for his father. He seemed to have the presents in reverse. Anyway, he admitted, if he couldn't have those, he'd be satisfied with "most anything the Christ Child wants me to have."

Another boy of 12 wrote wistfully that for four years he'd wanted a punching bag and boxing outfit, but his mother had never been able to find them when she went down town. And a crippled girl of 9 said she'd like a wrist watch and a locket with her name on it. "Dear Sir or Mam," she wrote, "I've been wanting them for years."

Another little boy asked the Christ Child to tell him how to persuade his dad to go to church. And if he could have anything else—well—he'd like a football.

But more often the requests are pitifully modest and utilitarian and the need seems to be greater this year because requests exceed the number of potential givers. But that doesn't mean they won't be answered—because all those already received will be.

Ask for Necessities

Many children ask only for clothes and even for food. Toys are without their ken when bare necessities are lacking. Letters reflect conditions and agonies which beset many families — sickness, want, crowded living, the habit of doing without all the highlights of life.

The background for these letters touches a period 60 years ago, when a little Negro boy who expected no Christmas in his own home told his story to Mary V. Merrick, then a young and crippled girl.

Miss Merrick told him to write the Christ Child and give the letter to her. She knew from her own experience how important such a letter could be.

The little boy brought not only his own note but 17 others from neighborhood children, and Miss Merrick enlisted the aid of friends to help fill the requests. From this beginning grew the Christ Child Society of which she is the president. The society, a member of the Community Chest, is always seeking opportunities to aid through the establishment of settlement houses, through convalescent homes, through camping activities, through a Christmas program.

In each Washington parish, volunteers visit both Catholic and non-Catholic families whom they think will have no Christmas. Children in these homes are asked to write the Christ Child telling him their wants. Children in Christ Child Settlement House write him, too, and from the Christ Child Farm come many other letters.

Volunteers Collect Gifts

These letters are distributed from a central point to volunteers of the society to answer as completely as possible. Toys, warm clothing and extra special things little children have longed for are then sent to the Blessed Sacrament School, 5841 Chevy Chase Parkway, to be packaged and sorted according to sections of the city. The work keeps a committee of volunteers busy all day for days before Christmas. When everything is complete, Edward Costigan, contractor, donates his trucks to deliver the packages to their respective destinations. The trucks will be busy on Monday and Tuesday of next week carrying their important load.

Every letter to the Christ Child bears with it some child's dream and hopes and every fulfillment strengthens some child's belief in the precious things of life.

Members of the Christmas committee responsible for helping to make the Christ Child story come true are Mrs. Louis Quinter, chairman; Miss Margaret Gowans, treasurer; Miss Jane Callaghan, secretary; Mrs. Matthias Mahorner. Miss Mary Callahan, Miss Joanna Gorham, Mrs. Joseph L. Dwyer, Mrs. Daniel E. Garges, and Mrs. Harold Kilcoyne. Mrs. Albert R. Beatty is chairman of visitors.

REGULAR visitors to Christ Church Settlement House, 608 Massachusetts ave. ne., these three youngsters gather around a scene of The Nativity as the eldest, 11-year-old, Helen, pens one of the 2000 letters of Christmas requests to be received by the Christ Child this season. Helen herself is hoping for a new coat, her 7-year-old sister, Grace (left), longs for a doll walker, while Robert, 8, is wishing for a red truck. "And don't forget a bone for me," prompts their frisky puppy, Blackie, as he kibitzes on the letter-writing

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Groucho No Sloucho in Defining Terse Verse

Harold Gustafson's "Adam Had 'Em" poem brings some interesting repercussions.

"It was written by Strickland Gillilan, and he called it 'On the Antiquity of Microbes'," writes Katherine L. Sharp of 5035 S. 25th st., Arlington, Va.

"I heard Mr. Gillilan recite the lines on the old Redpath Chautauqua platform in Clarksville, Tenn., more than 30 years ago," adds Griffith Foskett of 2009 Wyoming ave. nw.

Annabelle Stanton of 2122 California st. nw. and Mrs. Donald E. V. Henderson of 4460 Greenwich pkwy. nw. suggest that an even shorter poem, treating with the questionable importance of Man, would be:

I
Why?

But Al Dodge of 5752 Sherrier pl. nw. closes the debate with the ultimate in terse verse:

That does it. I think it's time to go back to our regulation couplets and quatrains—and I don't mean the Groucho Marx variety.

Groucho is the guy who defined a rhyming couplet as: "A small pest and his wife."

QUESTION AND ANSWER

"What's happened to the Lizzy Stoners?" asks Walli Simpson. "Haven't heard from them lately."

I have, Walli. I've got a whole stack of letters on the subject, but I thought maybe it was getting boring by now.

Would anybody care to read the latest pros and cons on long skirts? I'll print them if you want me to.

MAIL BAG

The following letter is self-explanatory:

"It's too bad your space is so limited. I could send you a wealth of material for your People Are Nicer Than Anybody dept.

"As a result of your recent item I have received a generous and heartening response from people who want to send food and clothing to specific European families.

"This has made for a happy Christmastide all around—the filling of a real need overseas, happiness for the senders, and an especially warm glow around the heart for me.

"Thanks to everybody who responded, and if anybody else is interested, I'm still available at RAndolph 0872 with more names of needy families."

ADD SIGNS

"Is the meat shortage this bad?" asks Mrs. LeRoy Hafer of 3411 Varnum st., Brentwood, Md., as she comments on our Zoo's sign:

"Lost Children Will Be Taken to the Lion House."

NEW WORDS DEPT.

I'm sure we're all familiar with smog, which is a combination of smoke and fog.

But Katherine L. Sharpe of 5035 S. 25th st., Arlington, Va., wonders if we know the new word for the stuff that covers our pavements in the wintertime.

It's "snirt."

Harry C. DeTurk of 2808 Terrace rd. se. adds another new word to our collection by suggesting that the President lives in a "Trumansion."

RECORDS NEEDED

The boys' and girls at the Industrial Home School were recently given a fine radio and phonograph combination by Mrs. J. Brookes Knight of 5520 Carolina pl. nw.

Carl Oliver, principal of the school, tells me that the kids are now trying to get together a good collection of records. Their preference runs to folk tunes, college songs, and semi-classical selections.

Charles Dana Beaschler, director of music at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, has offered to serve as a downtown collection depot for contributions.

Or, if it's more convenient, you can send or bring your records directly to the school. It's address is: Industrial Home School, 2453 Wisconsin ave. nw., Washington 7, D. C.

Anybody who can help in this work is asked to contact Mrs. T. P. McNamara of 3614 Gainesville st. se., who is spark-plugging the drive. Her telephone number is Twining 8199.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

This didn't happen in any of our esteemed local contemporaries, but it's nice to know that other newspapers also make mistakes.

Mrs. F. L. Moon of 3578 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, Va., forwards this clipping from a Memphis (Tenn.) church page:

"The service will consist of hymns, prayers, and medications."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—Nick the Greek, the fabulous gambler, tells of watching a poker game among four professionals and a Midwest businessman who was to be trimmed by them. The stranger, however, suspected that he had been marked as the sucker when the big pot would come around. He knew it had come around when he was dealt four aces.

When the bets were down the stranger didn't stand pat, as the holder of four aces usually would do. Instead, he discarded three cards and asked for three others. This upset the order of the draw in the stacked deck. His opponent, who was to have drawn the card he needed for a royal flush, didn't draw it. The stranger won, on a pair of aces.

Because of the need for dollars, Britain's plum puddings are being exported to America. But at Customs they've encountered difficulties with the Food and Drug Act. The puddings, therefore, may no longer be labeled plum puddings, because there are no plums in them. They'll be called Christmas puddings, even though they were shipped here in July.

Clifford Odets' paintings will be reproduced on Xmas cards this season.

The nomination of Wayne Coy for the FCC chairmanship is being contested by Frank Robertson, a radio lawyer. Robertson's backers include Bricker and Taft, and Leslie Biffle, the President's friend.

The newspapers announced that Gromyko was moving from his Columbus ave. apartment, which is over a saloon, to a $500,000 Park ave. mansion at 68th st. The indication that Mr. and Mrs. Gromyko were planning to make this change came last October, at the opening of the Soviet Consul General's quarters on Park ave., when Mrs. Gromyko inspected the elegant house, then described the dismal Gromyko quarters, and said: "We will supervise some changes."

Because of John Steinbeck's teasing references to photographer Robert Capa in their new book, "A Russian Journal With Pictures," it will include a chapter written by Capa in self-defense.

Martin Gosch, producer of the Emmett Lavery play, "A Gentleman from Athens"—which closed Saturday night—paled at the premiere Monday night when he suddenly realized that the opening was the thirteenth performance of the play: three performances in Wilmington, eight in Boston and one preview.

Band Leader Tommy Dorsey is so confident of an early settlement of the Petrillo ban against recordings after January 1 that he is making no stockpile recordings.

The tiny gold shoes worn as charms by the Piper Cub pilots in their round-the-world flight are a duplicate set of those used in "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Auriol Told of Visit's Purpose

By Drew Pearson

Copyright 1947 The Bell Syndicate, Inc.

(Editor's note: Drew Pearson is now in Paris and his column today takes the form of a report he is making to President Vincent Auriol of France on the food collected by the Friendship Train.)

Paris.

To the President of the French Republic,

Dear Mr. President:

Auriol

I have come to France because I felt I owed it to the millions of Americans who contributed to the Friendship Train to report on how this food was collected and the motives behind it. I am merely acting as spokesman for many others who would like to be here but can't.

This is a difficult report to make, difficult because it is almost impossible to translate into words the feeling in men's hearts.

To begin at the beginning, the idea of the Friendship Train took root about two months ago when many Americans were perturbed that our Congress was slow and niggardly about helping our friends in Europe. So it was proposed that a train be started in California with perhaps one boxcar and, letting the plain people of the country contribute food, pick up other boxcars of food as the train moved across the continent to the Atlantic.

A committee was formed, headed by Harry Warner and including representatives of farmers, labor unions, businessmen and service clubs. The railroads said they would be glad to haul the train free, and that was how the Friendship Train started. It was just an idea—but an idea founded on international friendship.

American Will to Give

But, Mr. President, although I pride myself on being an accurate newspaperman, I confess that I underestimated the American will to give. Instead of one train, we ended up with seven different sections. Instead of five railroads cooperating, a total of 12 demanded the right to help, and the railroad unions were equally anxious to aid their friends in Europe. Not only did most of the railroad trainmen haul the trains without salary but many railroad workers not on the line of the train mailed me checks saying they wanted to contribute, too.

Both labor and business filled up these Friendship Trains. The teamsters' union helped to load the cars; the steel workers' union contributed money to buy carloads of canned milk; the farmers' union contributed flour.

Most of this food came from very humble people. In Hawaii the people contributed a total of eight cents apiece, but their contribution totaled two carloads of sugar, which is six European boxcars. In Wichita, Kans., the school children ran errands and saved their lunch money until they were able to purchase one carload of wheat. In Wyoming a dentist toured most of that very mountainous and sparsely settled State until, with the help of many others, Wyoming had collected almost as much as some of the richer farm States.

The State of Nebraska is supposed to be against cooperation with Europe. At least, that's how most of its representatives vote in Congress. But we never had more enthusiastic, more generous crowds out to meet the train than those in Nebraska. In Iowa—another farm State—a group of farmers who had been to Europe traveled with the train, refuting Congressman John Taber, who said that food was not needed in Europe.

Some people in France, I understand, have thought that this Friendship Train was really inspired by the American Government. However, I can tell you that about the only city that did almost nothing to help was Washington, D. C., and it was only at the last minute that the Lions Club of Brentwood, Md., a little town on the edge of Washington, gave a carload of flour—thus saving the Nation's Capital from the ignominy of not participating.

It is important to note that President Truman's home town, Kansas City, did contribute in a big way with 14 cars of food and one of the first telegrams I received was from Mr. Truman's home county, saying that they refused to be left out. In the end, we had to send a special train through Kansas City, where President Truman's neighbors had especially stamped their bags of flour with this message:

"From Jackson County, Missouri, in the heart of America, this bag of flour comes to you with greetings and best wishes, whatever your race or nationality. May this flour be received in the same spirit in which it is sent—The Brotherhood of All Mankind. As that great teacher of world brotherhood, Jesus of Nazareth, commanded, 'Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye unto them.'"
